A NEW AND PERFECT HORSE SHOE

IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING TO EVERY ONE WHO OWNS A HORSE, AND TO ALL WHO HAVE TO DO WITH THE CARE AND PRESERVATION OF HORSES' FEET.

One of the most prevalent and perplexing difficulties that horse owners have to contend with, especially in stone paved cities, is in keeping the feet of their horses in sound condition and good form. So almost universal are unsound feet that a prominent horse man of New York city, who has had 40 years experience in the supervision of horses, says:—"There are not to-day in the city of New York 10 horses in 100 that have been upon our street pavements one year that have sound feet."

The probability that this evil is caused, in part at least, by the rather rude form of shoe commonly in use, is strengthened by the assertion of an eminent veterinary surgeon, who says:—"Nearly all of my business comes from the present method of shoeing horses."

The John D. Billings patent machine-rolled Horse Shoe, with continuous calk, which is now introduced to the public, is the result of long study and close observation; and, it is believed, will obviate in a very great degree, the evils spoken of above.

It places the horse upon a natural and evenly bearing surface all round the wall of the hoof. It has a springing quality that makes it the most healthful shoe worn. It keeps the foot in good shape. It prevents the horse from slipping down. It prevents him from wearing the shoe upon one side. It enables him to travel with greater ease and confidence than with other shoes. It is stronger and lighter than other shoes. It will wear longer than other shoes. It will more than pay for itself in preserving horses' feet. Following are the opinions of several gentlemen of intelligence and great experience with horses:—"You have struck the right principle." "It is the best shoe I have ever seen." "For a railroad shoe, that is the best in the world." "That is the most sensible horse shoe I ever saw." "Off of stone pavements there is no shoe on the face of the earth that can compare with it." The surgeon quoted above, says:—"If that shoe comes into general use it will injure my business very much." Also another surgeon says:—"That shoe will help flat footed horses if the sole is not pared too thin."

The shoe will be accompanied with a nail especially adapted to it.

Arrangements have been made with the following well known and old established shops in New York city where the shoes are put on by the most experienced horse shoers:—

David Roberge, 103 West 30th st.
Atchison & Hamill, 64 East Houston st. and 416 East 14th st.
Murray & Sadlier, 207 East 23d st.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1878.

THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS—UNEXPECTED QUIETUDE ON THE PART OF THE MALCONTENTS—EXCELLENT LESSONS TAUGHT BY COMMUNICATION WITH CONSTITUENTS.

The joint caucus of the republicans to-night proved to be an unexpected and decisive victory for the President. It was reluctantly called by Mr. Hale at the urgent and repeated solicitations of a considerable number of anti-Hayes men, and only after he had several times put them off. Some of the malcontents boasted beforehand of their determination to speak their minds freely to-night about the outrageous conduct of the President and the deplorable condition of the carpet-baggers in the South, and the disappointments of office-seekers in the North. These matters it was thought were to be freely discussed, but the assembly was almost as mild as a Quaker meeting.

After an amiable address by Mr. Hale, and the selection of a Congressional committee, Mr. Sargent rose and offered a resolution that the President be asked to recall his civil service order. Mr. Sargent spoke at some length, and with a good deal of bitterness of the President's misconduct, of his miserable Southern policy, of his management of the civil service, of the blight he has brought upon the party, and made some feeling allusions to the misfortunes which the party had suffered in California through Mr. Hayes' course.

To Mr. Sargent's amazement he found no second. Senator Edmunds, in a very quiet way, remarked that it was not useful for the caucus to do what Mr. Sargent had proposed, and suggested that it would be much easier to allow the Chair to appoint a special committee of eleven, who could do in the matter what seemed to them best, and who ought to have authority to use their own discretion. Mr. Edmunds' remarks turned the tables so completely on poor Mr. Sargent that he was not heard from again.

Mr. John T. Wait, of Connecticut, had the audacity to get up and make a civil service reform speech.

Mr. Conger, of Michigan, followed, with the remark that it was hardly worth while for the caucus to confirm the people in the belief which they already entertained that Congress was trying to bully the President, and that the whole difficulty was about the offices. The action proposed by Mr. Sargent would, he thought, look to the people like office holders trying to rule about offices and he did not think it prudent to put themselves in that position before the public. He was not satisfied with the President's policy in some things, especially the Southern policy, but he did not want to take any action which should put them in the position before the country of quarrelling about office.

On Senator Edmunds' motion, Mr. Hale, as chairman of the caucus, was instructed to appoint a committee of eleven, with power to admonish the President, if they think it best, and the caucus adjourned, neither Mr. Jorgensen, nor Mr. Martin I. Townsend nor anybody else showing any alacrity in attacking either the President or the Cabinet. Not even Mr. Schurz was named.

Several members of the caucus friendly to the President had anticipated a stormy time and had prepared themselves to defend Mr. Hayes and his policy, but when Mr. Sargent sat down it was seen by them that the game of the anti-Hayes men was up and that they need not trouble themselves about a defence, and after a quiet consultation they determined that there was no necessity for them even to speak.

The caucus was pretty fully attended, but neither Senator Blaine nor Senator Conkling was present. The Hayes republicans have within a few days become much bolder and outspoken than before. The reports from the country show Congressmen that the people generally are on the President's side and that there is a certain amount of indignation with the republicans here for their action toward Mr. Hayes and especially at Senator Howe's speech. When Mr. Foster, the other day, at the Gorham meeting, was asked if anything could be said in defence of Mr. Hayes, he bluntly replied, "Certainly," and proceeded to point out that Mr. Hayes had given peace to the South and an honest administration to the country. He has received dozens of letters already from all parts of the country approving of his language, and several republican Representatives who have lately visited their districts return here with the quiet report that their people are by no means pleased with the Senate's attitude toward the President. One of these gentlemen remarked that he thought two-thirds of the republicans of his district stood by the President, the other third being indignant, but disinclined to have anybody make a fuss with Mr. Hayes.

PRIVATE CLAIMS BEFORE CONGRESS—REPRESENTATIVE POTTER'S BILL TO REMOVE A BURDEN FROM OUR NATIONAL LEGISLATORS AND DESTROY THE LOBBY.

Mr. Clarkson Potter introduced a bill in the House to-day intended to relieve Congress of the great burden of considering the mass of private claims constantly pressing upon it. Of 4,400 bills which have been brought before the House since last October at least one half are of this kind. In a public letter to Senator Kernan in 1876 Mr. Potter spoke of the evil which this bill is intended to cure, showing that by the rules of the House two days in every week, or one third of the session, is given to the consideration of private business—that is, to bills for payment, or gifts, or bounties, or relief, or some form of privilege to private persons. These claims are first referred to a committee of ten or so, who, in turn, refer them to some one member, who hears the statements or ex-parte evidence offered by the applicant, and reports the bill back to the committee, who, if they approve it, report it to the House, by whom, after brief discussion, it is passed or rejected. All this is usually done ex-parte, without any opposing interest being heard, without any general publicity, without any oral examination of witnesses, without any check against fraud and without any prescribed rules or regulations. That such a determination of claims should necessarily result in great abuses is unavoidable. It is hardly too much to say that a person with a just claim upon Congress might almost as well abandon it as pursue it, and that no one with an unjust claim, if only plausible, persistent and needy, need be without some hope of success. Beyond this such claims furnish the chief source of corruption in Congress. Public measures must be mainly determined with reference to public ends, and therefore rarely furnish either inducement or opportunity for corruption. But with private measures the reverse is true, and if members of Congress are ever corrupted or purposely misled or advantage taken of their names to defraud and plunder claimants, experience has shown that it is invariably in connection with these or kindred measures of private legislation.

Mr. Potter's bill does not propose to relieve Congress of the final decision in such cases, but compels claimants to appear in the first instance before the Court of Claims, which shall try the facts, and the Court is to report to Congress, which is not to consider any cases except such as are favorably reported to it by the Court. The bill is in these words:—

SECTION 1.—Any person who may have a claim against the United States not founded upon contract or of which the Court of Claims would not now have jurisdiction, but founded upon equity and justice, may file his bill in the Court of Claims of the United States, setting out the grounds of his claim and the relief desired by him, and the Attorney General of the United States shall appear and plead thereto as provided for other cases.

SEC. 2.—Any issue of fact joined upon such bill may be tried by the Court, as now provided for cases of which it has jurisdiction.

SEC. 3.—The Court shall find the facts appearing from the testimony before them in each case and shall report their findings to Congress, with their opinion as to the determination that should be made of such claim.

SEC. 4.—Congress shall not consider nor allow nor authorize the payment of any private claim not payable under existing laws until the same has been heard and reported to Congress by said Court of Claims, as herein provided.

SEC. 5.—All claims against the United States provided for by this act not brought to suit within six years from the passage of this act shall be barred, except when the claimants are under legal disability to take action, and then the action must be brought within three years after such disability shall cease.

It is understood that the Court of Claims has now so far completed its business that it has time to attend to that which this bill would throw upon it. The bill has the favor of prominent men of both parties, and there is reason to hope that it will become a law at this session, and thus relieve Congress of a great burden and pretty much destroy the lobby.

THE AMOUNT OF RENT PAID BY THE GOVERNMENT—A PROPOSITION FOR THE IMMEDIATE CONSTRUCTION OF ALL BUILDINGS REQUIRED—ESTIMATE OF THE RESULTANT SAVING.

Mr. Schleicher, of Texas, who has a bill directing the immediate completion of all the government buildings now begun and the construction of others at places where they are needed, and where the government now pays rent, has caused to be prepared a return showing what the government now pays as annual rent. The sum amounts to about $900,000 a year, which he desires shall be capitalized at five per cent and bonds issued for the capital sum with which to go to work at building on a great scale. It is doubtful whether this plan will succeed; but the figures he has obtained have a good deal of interest of their own. It appears that the Post Office Department pays an annual rental of $296,307: the Treasury, $273,952; the War Department, $231,000; the Navy, $13,640; the Interior, $27,779, and the Department of Justice, $86,905.

The following are the amounts of rent paid by the government in the principal cities taken by States:—Montgomery, $4,080; Little Rock, $3,360; San Francisco, $66,620; Denver, $2,240; Hartford, $4,480; Jacksonville, $3,206; Atlanta, $15,088; Chicago, $74,663; Indianapolis, $900; Keokuk, $2,160; Leavenworth, $3,100; New Orleans, $18,000; Boston, $42,000; Detroit, $4,340; St. Paul, $5,964; Vicksburg, $1,380; St. Louis, $23,000; Omaha, $4,620; Concord, N. H., $1,200; Jersey City, $2,400; Brooklyn, $25,260 (the items being—Post Office, $7,860; Treasury, $2,400, and Justice, $15,000); Albany, $5,425; New York, $164,000; Syracuse, $4,025; Troy, $3,000; Buffalo, $3,600; Raleigh, $3,950; Cincinnati, $7,644; Dayton, $2,650; Alleghany, $2,332; Harrisburg, $2,600; Philadelphia, $12,000; Charleston, S. C., $2,952; Memphis, $3,370; Nashville, $5,075; Austin, $2,700; Brownsville, $3,500; Galveston, $4,740; San Antonio, $13,000.

There are a great number of other places where rent is paid by the government. Mr. Schleicher takes the ground that the annual rental is generally high, covering at least ten or twelve per cent on the value of the property; that materials and labor are now very cheap, and that if the government can borrow on bonds at five per cent and erect its own buildings at once it will save a great deal of money. It is very well known that rents paid by the government ran up very high under the last administration. Secretary Sherman, during the first six months of his administration of the Treasury, reduced the rents in the great cities by about $200,000. The sums named above are paid at this time.

OPPOSITION TO THE NEW TARIFF BILL BY PARLIAMENTARY TACTICS—SOME PECULIARITIES IN THE RULES OF THE HOUSE—HOW THE SCRUTINY OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE IS EVADED.

The opponents of Mr. Wood's tariff are trying to kill it by parliamentary rules. The rules of the House of Representatives are fearfully and wonderfully made, and are sometimes made use of to prevent discussion of measures disagreeable to the minority and almost as often by ingenious members to get money out of the Treasury, which, under the plain construction of the rules, they could not get. Mr. Conger, who is the leader of the opposition to the tariff, holds that when the House goes into Committee of the Whole it must take up the bills on the Speaker's table in the regular order; that therefore when the House voted the other day to make the Tariff bill a special order it broke the rules and the vote cannot stand. His object is to prevent any discussion at all, but the Speaker holds that while the rule cited by Mr. Conger is good the House, after it has resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, has the undoubted power by a majority to take up any business it prefers, and the majority may therefore, if they choose, go to the tariff. In a different way the rules are ingeniously evaded in order to run an appropriation through without proper scrutiny. In this case the co-operation of Senators is required. A rule of the House requires that all bills requiring the appropriation of money shall be examined in Committee of the Whole, but a member wants an appropriation for a public building, say in a city in Missouri, and does not believe he would get it if it were scrutinized in Committee of the Whole. He therefore frames a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase a site for his public building on condition that the State shall cede jurisdiction to the federal government and exempt it from taxation. But the bill has no appropriation of money, and it passes accordingly with but little scrutiny. When it reaches the Senate a Senator makes interest with the proper committee and gets that to insert an appropriation of $100,000, and thus amended it goes back to the House, where the author of this trick now cites another rule which asserts that no bill which has passed the House and been amended by the Senate needs to go to the Committee of the Whole, and under this rule the bill is sent to a committee, and is some day quietly reported and passed as a matter of course. It is believed this ingenious trick has but recently come into use.

THE NEW YORK CUSTOM HOUSE AGAIN.

It is probable that the President may presently send in new nominations for Collector and Surveyor of New York, but there is reason to believe that none of the persons hitherto mentioned publicly in connection with these places will be nominated. There have been reports here for some time that Mr. Thomas E. Stewart would probably be named as Collector, but these reports are groundless.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1878.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The republican Congressional caucus, which was held in the hall of the House of Representatives this evening, was called to order by Mr. Hale, who proposed Senator Anthony for chairman. The latter declined the office on the ground that he was not acquainted sufficiently with the faces of his colleagues in the House who were so numerously present to make a good presiding officer. At his suggestion Mr. Hale was selected.

The caucus appointed the following named gentlemen as the National Republican Congressional Committee, the nomination of each member being made by the respective State delegations:—

Maine—Representative Eugene Hale.
New Hampshire—Senator E. H. Rollins.
Massachusetts—Representative W. W. Crapo.
Rhode Island—Senator Burnside.
Connecticut—Representative Wait.
New York—Representative Frank Hiscock.
New Jersey—Representative Clement H. Sinnickson.
Pennsylvania—Representative Jacob M. Campbell.
Virginia—Representative Joseph Jorgensen.
North Carolina—Representative Curtis H. Brogden.
South Carolina—Representative Joseph H. Rainey.
Alabama—Senator George E. Spencer.
Mississippi—Senator Blanche K. Bruce.
Louisiana—Senator William Pitt Kellogg.
Ohio—Representative Charles Foster.
Tennessee—Representative J. M. Thornburgh.
Illinois—Senator Richard J. Oglesby.
Indiana—Representative Leonidas Sexton.
Missouri—Representative Henry M. Pollard.
Arkansas—Senator Stephen W. Dorsey.
Michigan—Representative J. A. Hubbell.
Florida—Representative Horatio Bisbee, Jr.
Iowa—Senator William B. Allison.
Wisconsin—Senator Angus Cameron.
California—Representative H. F. Page.
Minnesota—Representative Mark H. Dunnell.
Oregon—Senator John H. Mitchell.
Kansas—Representative William A. Phillips.
Nevada—Senator John P. Jones.
Nebraska—Senator Algernon S. Paddock.
Colorado—Senator Jerome B. Chaffee.
New Mexico—Delegate Trinidad Romero.
Washington Territory—Delegate Orange Jacobs.
Dakota Territory—Delegate Jefferson P. Kidder.
Wyoming Territory—Delegate William W. Corlett.

Additional members were appointed from the following named States, there being no republicans among their members:—Delaware, Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, Texas, West Virginia, Utah Territory, Arizona, Idaho and Montana.

Senator Sargent offered the following preamble and resolutions:—

Whereas the restoration of the democratic party to power would be a great national calamity, to avert which all patriotic citizens should put forth their best efforts; and whereas nearly ninety thousand republican officials throughout the land understand themselves to be under orders from the President to abstain from participation in some of the necessary steps in this great work; therefore be it

Resolved, That the President be requested to rescind his order forbidding participation by officials in the executive branch of the civil service in meetings, caucuses, conventions and committees of a political character.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this meeting transmit a copy of this resolution, properly authenticated, to the President.

Senator Sargent, in opening the business of the night with the presentation of his set of resolutions, spoke bitterly of the ill effect of the President's policy in paralyzing the political effort and influence of so many good and true men as were unfortunate enough to hold office under the administration. He cited a case in California, in one of the rural districts, where the people were in the habit of meeting at a school house for instruction in the tenets of the republican faith. But all of a sudden the man who used to light up the school house for these meetings was appointed Postmaster, and at once he refused to interfere and left the people in night and darkness. During the last campaign in California among the ablest stump speakers of the State were federal office-holders. A number of them had appointments to make speeches, and the order of the President came out, when they were compelled to abandon their appointments. Then he instanced the case of the San Francisco Navy Yard vote, which had never before gone any way but republican, but went democratic last year because the order of the President broke up the republican clubs and organizations. He denounced the civil service reform order and attacked the evil effects of it without making any attack on the President. He demanded in the spirit of his resolution that the order should be rescinded.

Senator Edmunds followed Senator Sargent, and took the ground that the inference that the civil service order was so stringent was erroneous. It had been subjected to grammatical analysis by the Attorney General, and a modification construed out of it that left it without the power to do the injury that was charged against it. It was in this light he thought the order ought to be regarded, and he deemed it more judicious to have the resolutions referred to the committee, with instructions to the latter to confer with the President.

Senator Teller criticised sharply the interpretation Senator Edmunds had put upon the civil service order, and propounded several inquiries to test the validity of the position taken by the Senator from Vermont.

Senator Edmunds contended that the President had virtually ignored the operation of the order in his directions to the Attorney General.

Congressman Charles G. Williams, of Wisconsin, while he admitted all that Senator Sargent had said as to the trouble and obstruction made by the President's order, deprecated the passage of the resolution. He could not see the policy of pressing it now. If adopted it would seem like dictation to the President by Congress, and it would not be proper for either the President or Congress to be dictated to by each other.

Congressman Conger, of Michigan, also indorsed what Senator Sargent had pleaded in derogation of the civil service order. He had heard the same sort of complaints from his own constituents, but on the whole he did not think it wisdom to interfere. He therefore would strenuously oppose the adoption of the resolution. He thought its effect would be to separate the people more and more from the officeholders and to antagonize them. It was a useless piece of business, too, because Congress could not ask the President to withdraw or rescind his order, nor could the President with dignity do so.

Mr. Conger was apprehensive that any appearance of dissension among the republicans would be a consolation to the democrats at this time, and he contended that any issues proposed to be brought up could be fought out in the campaign. Therefore nothing should be done to excite any discord. The republican party should stand by its principles and allow no division or dissension in its ranks, but stand as it had, in solid column, for the defeat of the democratic party.

Mr. Conger was followed by Mr. Jones, of Ohio, who, in a brief speech, favored the policy of the President. He declared that either the President was right or not right. The last remark elicited such response from the gentlemen present as indicated that the majority thought the President was not right.

Mr. Jones moved to lay the resolution on the table.

This called out Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, who made some cogent remarks.

Mr. Bayne, of Pittsburg, took the ground that to lay the resolution on the table was the very worst thing that could be done, as it would make an issue at once between the republican party and the President. He thought the better policy was to adopt the resolution of Senator Edmunds and allow the committee appointed by the caucus to confer in their discretion with the President on the matters contained in the resolution.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bayne's remarks, Mr. Jones withdrew his motion.

Mr. Thompson, of Pennsylvania, made a speech, and then a vote was taken on the resolutions, when the motion of Senator Edmunds was adopted with not more than a dozen dissenting voices.

Mr. Waite, of Connecticut, made a vigorous speech in support of the motion of Senator Edmunds, and took the position that if there was any issue upon the President's civil service reform order there were quite a number of republicans in Connecticut who indorsed the order and would adhere to it. He argued that it would make dissension in the party, which result he thought very unwise at this time.

Dr. Darrell, who was recently the representative of the Third Louisiana district, happened to be in the hall when the caucus was called to order, and was about leaving when General Garfield requested him to remain, and having stated to the caucus that, in his opinion, Mr. Darrell had been unjustly deprived of his seat in the Forty-fifth Congress, he moved that Mr. Darrell be recognized by the republicans of the Forty-fifth Congress as the present legal representative of the Third Louisiana district. The motion was unanimously carried and Mr. Darrell remained throughout the deliberations. This, it is understood, is the first time a Congressional caucus has made such a recognition, and the fact is spoken of as an earnest of party discipline for the coming campaign.

CITIZENS OF WISCONSIN TO THE PRESIDENT—UNQUALIFIED DISAPPROVAL OF SENATOR HOWE'S ATTACK ON THE ADMINISTRATION.

The following letter was received here by the President to-day from Wisconsin, signed by several hundred of the leading republicans of Milwaukee:—

To PRESIDENT HAYES:—

The undersigned citizens of Wisconsin, residents of Milwaukee, have read with great regret the newspaper report of a speech of Senator Howe, of this State, in which he arraigns the present national administration and personally attacks the President and member of his Cabinet. We take this method, by open letter, to assure you that Senator Howe's speech does not reflect the sentiments of any considerable portion of the republican party in Milwaukee. We speak for ourselves, but we believe that we utter the sentiments of a very large majority of the republicans of this city when we assure you that we heartily approve of the declaration of your letter of acceptance and of your inaugural address, recognizing the permanent importance of an absolute and radical reform in our civil service and in favor of a policy of conciliation toward States lately in rebellion and we applaud your efforts to put these declarations into practice.

We condemn as particularly unwise and uncalled for Senator Howe's attack on Secretary Schurz. We assure you that the selection of Mr. Schurz for a place in your Cabinet gave us, his former townsmen and neighbors, especial gratification, and the official acts of Mr. Schurz since he has been Secretary of the Interior have emphasized our satisfaction in his appointment.

MILWAUKEE, March 30, 1878.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TITLE—A HITCH IN THE MONTGOMERY BLAIR PROJECT.

The David Dudley Field bill and the Montgomery Blair resolutions to remodel the White House are still in the pocket of some unknown member of the House, and all that can be ascertained about them is that a conference is necessary to remove a hitch which has occurred since the latter part of last week. Whether the hitch was developed by the Congressional excursion to Chester on Saturday last or whether it has grown out of the debates in electing a new doorkeeper cannot be ascertained.

THE LITTLE DEFICIENCY BILL—DISAGREEMENT OF THE SECOND CONFERENCE COMMITTEE.

The second Conference Committee, consisting of Messrs. Windom, Dorsey and Beck, on the part of the Appropriation Committee of the Senate, and Messrs. Durham, Blount and Baker, on the part of the House Appropriation Committee, met to-day, and, after a session of several hours, adjourned, unable to agree upon the Little Deficiency bill as it is called. The republican members of the committee insist that the larger sum named for temporary clerks and for the expenditure to protect the government timber lands shall be reported in the bill. If the Senate insists on amending the House appropriation bills and then adhering to the amendments in conference committees it is evident that the day of adjournment is not so near at hand as the stage of business seemed to indicate.

GENERAL WASHINGTON DESPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1878.

THE INCOME TAX—DECISION OF THE COMMITTEE OF WAYS AND MEANS.

The Committee of Ways and Means to-day decided, by one majority, in favor of an income tax. The yeas were Messrs. Tucker, of Virginia; Sayler, of Ohio; Robbins, of North Carolina; Harris, of Georgia; Burchard, of Illinois, and Gibson, of Louisiana—6. The nays:—Messrs. Wood, of New York; Garfield, of Ohio; Banks, of Massachusetts; Kelley, of Pennsylvania, and Phelps, of Connecticut—5. The details of the measure have yet to be prepared.

FORCED LOANS IN MEXICO—IMPARTIALITY IN THE LEVY—DECISION OF THE UMPIRE OF THE MIXED COMMISSION CONCERNING THEM.

With reference to the question of forced loans mentioned in these despatches some days ago as a possible difficulty in the way of the re-establishment of relations between this country and Mexico it is stated upon authority that these loans have never been levied except in time of war, and then upon British, French and Mexicans as well as Americans; that in the twenty years between 1848 and 1868, during most of which time Mexico was at war, there were comparatively few cases of forced loans upon Americans. These were ruled out by Sir Edward Thornton, umpire of the Mixed Commission, on the ground that the taxes being levied upon natives and foreigners alike did not constitute a case for diplomatic intervention. In addition to this receipts were given which were made receivable for duties on imports at a very considerable discount, so that in many cases merchants actually derived large profits from the transactions; at all events none of them have been driven from Mexico by these exactions, and their steady increase of fortune has not been interfered with. It is also stated that all claims on this account growing out of the Diaz revolution which have been presented to the Mexican Treasury have been paid by Secretary Romero.

THE MORALITY OF MAIL MATTER—OPPOSITION TO THE COMSTOCK LAW.

J. B. Wolff, of New York, appeared before the Committee on Revision of the Laws, to-day on behalf of the 50,000 signers to the petition presented a few days ago by Representative Butler protesting against what is known as the Comstock law. He held that all such laws are unconstitutional, an invasion of personal and State rights, dangerous and subversive of society itself; that Congress has no power over the moral quality of mail matter; that all questions of common morality and crime belong to the States, except those expressly prohibited in express terms; that the law itself is ambiguous and dangerous in the hands of such men as Comstock, and that the whole nation is responsible for every falsehood told and injustice done under this law; and thus, by the infamous methods of Comstock and his confrères, wholesale crime is committed to punish a few harmless enthusiasts or a few hardened criminals. He massed all the facts bearing on the subject, State and national, to show the progress already made toward a censorship of the press and a practical union of Church and State, and the danger of placing it in the power of any man, or set of men, to say what is indecent or immoral in mail matter.

LIFE-SAVING MEDALS TO OFFICER THOMAS M'BRIDE AND POLICEMAN HUSSEY.

The Life-Saving Bureau, Treasury Department, has, at the request of Hon. S. S. Cox and on proofs made, ordered first class medals of gold to two of Mr. Cox's constituents—Officer Thomas McBride and Policeman Hussey. They have saved a score of lives each. The medals will be taken to New York next week by Mr. Cox, and delivered to Captain Berryman, of the Life-Saving Bureau, when the presentation will be made.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1878.

The House, at a quarter to one, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Garfield, of Ohio, in the chair, on the Pension Appropriation bill.

The bill appropriates $29,286,574, and provides that after July 1, 1878, pensions shall be paid by the Treasurer of the United States, under direction of the Secretaries of the Treasury and of the Interior. The items of Appropriation are as follows:—

For army invalids	$13,150,000
For widows and minors	12,830,000
For survivors of war of 1812	1,332,000
For widows of soldiers of war of 1812	1,247,974
For fees of examining surgeons	85,000
For navy invalids	210,000
For widows and minors	334,600
For fees of examining surgeons	1,000
For carrying out the provisions of the act	96,000

MR. SMITH, (rep.) of Pa., proceeded to explain the bill. The principal feature was the provision which proposed to abolish the pension agencies and devolve their duties upon the Treasurer of the United States. He read from a tabular statement to show that besides the salary of $4,000 which each agent received he also received from $10,000 to $15,000 in fees. By abolishing these agencies the government would save $200,000 annually.

MR. HANNA, (rep.) of Ind., stated that the pension agent had to pay his clerks out of these fees, and he thought the bill ought to be entitled "A bill to rob the pension agent of his pay."

MR. SMITH proceeded to argue in favor of the bill. President Hayes had consolidated the fifty-one agencies into eighteen and this bill simply proposed to consolidate those eighteen into one. He sent to the Clerk's desk and had read letters from the Secretary of the Interior and from the United States Treasurer in approval of the proposed change.

MR. POWERS, (rep.) of Me., objected to that provision of the bill which abolishes the pension agencies and argued that it would cost much more to carry out that plan than it costs now and that it would entail delay and expense on the pensioners who ought to be promptly paid.

MR. BRAGG, (dem.) of Wis., also opposed the bill on two grounds—first, that it would cause delay in the payment of pensions, and, second, because the bill came not from the Committee on Pensions (which committee antagonized the bill), but from the Committee on Appropriations, which had nothing to do with devising means for the payment of pensions, but which was monopolizing to itself the duties of the Naval Committee, the Military Committee, and, in fact, all the other standing committees of the House.

GENERAL BUTLER'S OWN BILL.

MR. BUTLER, (rep.) of Mass., said that he had given a great deal of consideration to the subject of paying pensions, and that he had some sessions ago prepared and introduced a bill on the subject. His bill provided, first, that the payment of pensions should be bi-monthly. This would relieve a great evil—the pledging of pensions to money sharks. The more legislation that there was to punish these money sharks the more usury they charged, so that it was no use to legislate in that direction. The second provision of his bill was that the postmasters at county seats were to be ex officio pension agents. When that bill was published in the papers a convention of pension agents was called to take measures against it and they buttonholed their members and defeated the bill. The only revenge he had was that the man who called the convention (a Philadelphia man he thought) defaulted soon afterward and ran away. There was no difficulty about paying pensioners. He would undertake to pay the pensions (and would give bonds) for one-fourth of what it now costs. He asked that the Committee on Appropriations would take a day or two to consider his bill. If they did not like it, he had introduced another bill on the same subject, proposing to have the pensioners paid through the money order offices. He thought it a disgrace and shame that money devoted to such a high charity could not be disbursed without a toll of nearly $750,000, or more than two and a half per cent.

MR. HEWITT IN DEFENCE OF THE BILL.

MR. HEWITT, (dem.), of N. Y., a member of the Committee on Appropriations, defended the bill, which he said would reduce the cost of paying pensioners to $130,000. The expenses last year were $452,000, and the estimate for next year was $315,000. This reduction of $140,000 a year had attracted the attention of the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee, having deemed that it was the result of the consolidation of fifty-eight pension agencies into eighteen, inquired as to whether further consolidation would not effect a further reduction. That was the origin of this bill. He reminded the House that under the existing system 87½ per cent of all the payments to pensioners were made in checks transmitted by mail. He denied the soundness of the objection to the bill, that it would cause delay in the payment of pensioners, and said that it was proposed to divide the rolls into twelve equal parts and to pay on those rolls every month instead of paying them all every quarter. This, he said, would much facilitate the work. Every pensioner would receive a quarter's pension at once, but the work of payment would go on continuously. In regard to Mr. Butler's proposition to pay pensions through county post offices he said that the allowance of ten cents a voucher would cost between $90,000 and $100,000, and that the whole expense under that system would be at least $145,000 or $15,000 more than reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

After some remarks by Mr. Finley, of Ohio, the committee rose without taking any action on the bill and the House, at a quarter past four, adjourned.

Thereupon a caucus of republican senators and members was announced to be held at eight o'clock this evening in the hall of the House.

THE MEXICAN BORDER.

RUMORS OF A LERDO MOVEMENT STARTED ON A SMALL BASIS OF FACT—OPERATIONS OF A SMUGGLING GANG.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1878.

Statements having lately appeared in Texas papers to the effect that an extensive revolutionary movement had broken out in the State of Yamoulysas, Mexico, based on a pronunciamento issued in favor of Lerdo by a Colonel Salinas, and that Escobedo was expected to head the movement, it appears on inquiry that the report is denied by both American and Mexican officials.

DESPATCH TO THE ADJUTANT GENERAL.

The following telegram, addressed to Adjutant General Vincent, shows on what foundation the rumor is based:—

FORT MCINTOSH, April 3, 1878.

ADJUTANT GENERAL, San Antonio:—

It is reported that some men, supposed to belong to Salinas' gang, or a lot of smugglers, had a fight on Sunday last with six of the Mexican Custom House guards, and that one man was killed and another wounded. Salinas himself was not seen. The supposed fight took place about twenty-five miles from New Laredo. I will endeavor to get more news. I do not deem it important, as the commanding officer of New Laredo promised me some time ago to inform men whenever there was anything reliable to report. So far he has not sent me word about the Sunday fight, or anything about the crossing.

SELLERS, Commanding.

A report was also published that the United States military prisoners at Fort Duncan had been fired upon from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. This report is denied by General Ord.

THE LECTURE SEASON.

CORONER ELLINGER'S ESSAY ON THE FAUST LEGENDS.

Coroner Moritz Ellinger read a carefully prepared essay on the "Faust Legends," before the Goethe Club, at their monthly meeting, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, last evening. Faust, said Mr. Ellinger, was probably a simple charlatan, of some accomplishments, who travelled considerably and was an adept in the art of making people talk of him. It is established beyond a doubt that he is not a mythical personage, but a real person, who lived during the first half of the sixteenth century and left traces of himself in various parts of Germany. He was born probably about 1480, as in 1506, the time we find the first traces of him in literature, he was at least twenty-five years old, and his death is to be set down between 1535 and 1540. The first mention of Faust is made by John of Trittenheim, the learned abbé, who, like all great scholars in the olden time, was himself suspected of practising the black art. In a letter dated August 20, 1507, addressed to John Wirdung, the mathematician of Hassfurt, he speaks of Faust as a vagabond, a babbler and a fraud. He is also mentioned by Conradus Mutianus Rufus in a letter dated October 3, 1513, and by Begardus and John Gast, the latter devoting several pages to an account of the adventures of Faust. He speaks of his compact with the devil, who accompanied him sometimes in the guise of a dog and sometimes in that of a servant. Mention is also made of the legend that when Faust's body was found the face was turned to the ground, and all efforts to lay the body on its back on the bier proved unavailing, the corpse always turning over again. Faust and his doings, however, would have been soon forgotten if the stories current in the people's mouths had not found a genius who, with a perception of the poetical and romantic legends which the people had woven around the life of a mere adventurer, collected the tales and published them in book form, at Frankfort-on-the-Main, in 1587. This was followed, in 1588, by a history of Faust, written in rhymes. The honor of the oldest dramatic treatment of the Faust legend belongs to an English author, Christopher Marlowe. The drama was first published in 1604. Marlowe's end was not unlike that of Faust in its tragic character, and his reputation as an infidel and a scoffer of religion was also in keeping with it.

Goethe, in his treatment of the Faust legend, kept closer to the original Faust-Buch than to any of the other versions. The great poet beheld in Faust a mirror of his own soul, the finite seeking the infinite, his giant intellect stretching into regions where it, too, must have become lost in tantalizing uncertainty. To comprehend the universe, its why and wherefore, has been the object of all the master minds, the Platos, the Aristotles, the Spinozas, the Spencers, the wise men of all ages and climes, and as long as the human intellect shall be capable of exercising its functions, it will attempt to solve the great mystery; but, alas! it will always remain an attempt and nothing more. The intellect can never solve the problem.

REV. RAPHAEL LEWIN ON MENDELSSOHN, THE PHILOSOPHER.

About one hundred people occupied seats last evening in the handsome club room of Standard Hall, corner of Forty-second street and Broadway. Dr. Lewin, the speaker of the evening, began by saying that to give proper emphasis to the life and character of Moses Mendelssohn it would be necessary to consider the terrible condition of the Jews in Central Europe prior to the time in which Mendelssohn lived. The lecture briefly reviewed some of the outrages practised on the members of this race, and at frequent intervals during his hour the lecturer devoted more attention to the Christian religion than he did to the deceased philosopher. In fact, the discourse was a critique on Protestantism, with an occasional reference to the subject announced. After briefly relating the well known historical facts given in the various biographies of the philosopher Dr. Lewin made some pithy comments on the persecutions of the Jews of that period. The gifted Lessing was an ardent friend of Mendelssohn and when Lessing died Mendelssohn spent his declining days in defending his memory against the charge made by Jacobi that he was a Spinozist or atheist. Mendelssohn married at the age of thirty-three, and his family was numerous and highly esteemed. The great musical composer was a grandson of the philosopher. The lecturer was very sarcastic toward Frederick the Great for his harsh treatment of the Jews, and his indifference to the treatment of Mendelssohn. Carlyle also received a touch of the speaker's satire for deifying the great Prussian. The lesson of Mendelssohn's life may be summed up in a few words. From poverty, obscurity and ignoble birth, this man, deformed in stature and of an outcast race, rose to a supreme moral and intellectual height. He mastered literature, philosophy, mathematics and the languages of modern and ancient tongues. He became a bookkeeper, cashier and partner in a great mercantile house while he studied philosophy. Then the gifted men of Germany and of Europe became his friends and companions. Through his efforts the Jews were reformed and made to win the respect of their enemies. Addison asked his son to be brought to his bedside, that he might see how a Christian could die. Mendelssohn, said the speaker, showed the world how a Jew could live. He was known as the modern Plato. He was called the Jewish Socrates, and yet the disciples of Luther tried to convert him. This "Lord saving" doctrine of Christianity has caused endless butchery and cruelty throughout the world for 1,800 years.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

Rev. William B. Affleck, the temperance evangelist, of England, will deliver his lecture, "Lost for Want of a Word," at the Thirtieth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, to-morrow (Friday) evening, in aid of the Women's Temperance Christian Union.

A petition is being circulated and freely signed by the clergymen of this city requesting Francis Murphy to visit the metropolis and make it the field of his labors for a season.

ESTIMATES CALLED FOR.

The Brooklyn Board of Estimate held its first meeting yesterday in the Mayor's office, and passed a resolution calling upon the heads of departments to send in their estimates, before May 1, of the money needed for their expenses for the year 1879.

JERSEY CITY FINANCES.

The Board of Aldermen of Jersey City met last evening, and at last succeeded in electing a member of the Board of Finance. Mr. Frederick Heppenheimer was the successful candidate.

FIFTEEN BALL POOL.

THE GRAND NATIONAL TOURNAMENT—C. DION, G. SLOSSON, S. KNIGHT AND RUDOLPHE WIN THEIR RESPECTIVE MATCHES.

The grand national pool tournament was continued yesterday afternoon in the Union Square Billiard Rooms. The interest in these games does not appear to flag, as the attendance at the afternoon and evening sessions was, if anything, better than it has been on either of the previous days. The play in the afternoon commenced with the contest between the Dion brothers, and they fought the hardest battle that has been decided thus far. Joe Dion won the first game, and Cyrille took the second and third. Joe Dion won the fourth, and the fifth and sixth were secured by Cyrille. The seventh after a hard fight was taken by Joe, then Cyrille cut loose and captured the eighth and ninth. At the close of the twentieth game they had each won ten. Cyrille Dion won the twenty-first and the match. The following is a score of the games:—

C. Dion	0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 1—11
J. Dion	1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 0—10

AFTERNOON MATCH.

The second contest of the afternoon session was between George Slosson and Clark Wilson. At the first it seemed as if these players were going to have a pretty close contest, as Slosson took the first and Wilson the second game. Slosson started off and won seven straight games and Wilson managed to secure the tenth. The next three games and the contest were won by Slosson. The following is the score of the games:—

G. Slosson	1 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 1 1 1—11
C. Wilson	0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 0—2

In the evening session the first match was between Samuel Knight and J. M. Warble, about the best in the lot with the "Swede" left out. There was a good deal of money on this match, as both men had plenty of backers at even money. Knight started out in excellent form, and won the first game before Warble had scored a point. In the next they both missed easy hazards, but Knight made up for his bad play by the neat bank on the object ball that he made for a winning shot. The third game also fell to Knight, who was playing a really good game, making his hazards in a very clean style. In the fourth and fifth games Knight had it all his own way, and Warble's friends began to look rather uncomfortable as their chances did not appear very good. In the sixth game, although Warble got to 55, he broke down on his next hazard, and Knight, holding the two remaining balls, won the game. The seventh was a repetition of the previous game, as Warble got as far as 54 and left two ringers on the table, both of which Knight disposed of in elegant style. There now began to be a prospect of eleven straights for Knight, and it looked better still when he added the eighth game to his score. The ninth game was a little closer contested, Warble doing a little business, but Knight got him on the home-stretch. In the tenth game Warble got to 53 and left three ringers on the table. Knight held one, and tracking for the others cleaned the table. The score now stood Knight 10 and Warble 0. The spectators now became quite excited and several bets were made on the next game. In the second or third shot Warble made a combination and the balls broke well. He broke down on an easy hazard and left Knight a splendid chance, but the latter was also a little nervous and slipped up. Warble then won the game. The next game was also pretty closely contested, and was finally secured by Warble. The thirteenth game and match were won by Knight. The following is the score of the games:—

Knight	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 0 1—11

SEXTON AND RUDOLPHE.

The next match was between the two well known billiard experts William Sexton and A. P. Rudolphe. There was a little betting on the result, mostly at evens, though in some few instances Rudolphe was a slight favorite. The professor won the first game without any trouble. In the second Sexton got a little break, but did not last, and Rudolphe scored another victory. The third, fourth and fifth games were also secured by the Professor, and then Sexton made a change in the programme and took the sixth game to his account. The seventh game was won by Rudolphe, and, after a close contest, he also took the eighth. The ninth game fell to Rudolphe, and the tenth after being reduced to single pool was secured by Sexton. The eleventh game was won by Rudolphe, and the twelfth by Sexton. Rudolphe won the thirteenth game easily. Sexton won the fourteenth and fifteenth games. Rudolphe won the sixteenth and seventeenth games and match. The following is the score of the games:—

A. P. Rudolphe	1 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 0 1 0 0 1 1—11
W. Sexton	0 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 1 0 1 1 0 0—6

The matches to be played to-day are as follows:—Afternoon—George Slosson vs. George Frey, and William Sexton vs. Clark Wilson. Evening—Cyrille Dion vs. A. P. Rudolphe, and Wahlstrom vs. Joseph Dion.

BENCH SHOWS.

WESTMINSTER KENNEL CLUB,
NEW YORK, April 8, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I have read with pleasure an editorial in your issue of Monday on the subject of "Bench Shows" which is particularly timely in view of the interesting and important event of that kind which occurs in this city next month. The question you agitate as to the exhibition of dogs by kennels or kennel clubs and by individuals is one deserving of attention, and the rapid increase in the number of organizations formed for the purpose of improving the various breeds of dogs, and, by a combination of purses, as it were, procuring the very finest specimens, is one that, in time, will require to be considered by bench show committees in the preparation of their premium lists. At present, however, the danger you apprehend—that clubs, or kennels, have an undue advantage over individual exhibitors—does not in reality exist. There is but one kennel club in the country, the Westminster Kennel Club, under whose auspices the New York show is given, in which, as yet, the dogs are owned by the club as a corporation, and at this show neither dogs owned by the club nor by individual members will compete. The other clubs are merely co-operative. A number of gentlemen find it more economical to board their dogs together and to employ one trainer than to keep up separate establishments, and although their dogs are entered at shows in the name of the club they are in reality the property of individuals. Of course this will change as the rivalry increases, particularly as large clubs are being formed which are sectional in their character, and I quite agree with your remarks that it will be necessary to distinguish between such organizations and individual owners when the former shall become exhibitors in their corporate capacity.

There is another question in this connection that I should like to notice if you will grant me the space. There are now three influential kennel clubs which have undertaken the management of bench shows, viz:—the Massachusetts Kennel Club, with headquarters at Boston; the Baltimore Kennel Club and the Westminster Kennel Club, of this city. Another is now being organized in Philadelphia. It would be an excellent idea if these four clubs would arrange each year for a "circuit" as to dates and uniform prize lists. The latter sadly need a more careful classification than has yet obtained in this country, although even now we can show a wonderful improvement over a year ago. Nor would it lessen the interest attached to our shows or the encouragement offered to breeders if challenge cups were provided, to be won for one or more years by animals of the same breed and owned or bred by the same person. It is also interesting to note the increased attention paid to the non-sporting classes, such as guard and pet dogs. Possibly by fostering a spirit of emulation we may in time raise our dogs of all classes to such a standard of excellence as to greatly lessen, if not remove, many prejudices now prevailing against them. Very respectfully,

WILLIAM M. TILESTON,
Chairman Bench Show Committee Westminster Kennel Club.

NEW YORK DOG SHOW.

The committee having in charge the second annual New York show of dogs have offered a special prize list for twenty-three classes. No dog or dogs, their get or progeny, can be entered for these prizes unless they have already been entered in the champion or regular classes.

STABBING AFFRAYS.

A slashing encounter took place yesterday at the dry dock, foot of Clinton street, between two sailors, named Oscar Sahlberg and Darwell Wilsgaard, in the course of which knives were freely used. When the contestants were separated the battle was declared a draw. Both men were badly injured. Sahlberg was disabled with a severe cut in the right hand and left leg, while his opponent, Wilsgaard, was laid up for repairs with an ugly gash in the left shoulder and a deep incision in his left leg. Both men were conveyed in an ambulance to Chambers Street Hospital.

A deadly encounter took place in front of No. 59 Bowery wherein the knife was used with probably fatal effect. William Fitzsimmons and Patrick Stafford had an altercation, when the former plunged a knife into the back of Stafford's neck. The wounded man was sent to the hospital and his assailant was committed by Judge Bixby to await the result of Stafford's injuries.

"RAZOR JACK."

John Morse, a big, brawny colored man, who bears the cognomen of "Razor Jack," on Tuesday night went to No. 71 Thompson street to visit a colored woman. William Ryan, a white man, happened to be there, and the two closed in a struggle in which the chances of success seemed about equal. Morse, however, called into play the weapon from the use of which he has earned his nickname. With it he slashed Ryan across the face, inflicting some dreadful gashes, and when captured he seemed to regret nothing so much as his leaving his deadly work uncompleted. His victim presented a sad appearance when produced in court yesterday. His clothing was soaked with blood and his face was covered with wounds both deep and ugly. He was sent to the hospital and Morse was held in $2,000.

FREE CANALS DEBATE

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

ALBANY, April 10, 1878.

The disputes between the two democratic factions of New York city represented at Albany threaten to perplex the deliberations of this Legislature quite as much as those of former Legislatures were perverted by them. Tammany and anti-Tammany strive for the mastery, the difference between the struggle now and the struggles in former years being that each side endeavors to do the most good instead of evil to the taxpayers, and the most good politically instead of pecuniarily for itself. Each side works hard to secure the alliance of republicans and country democrats. Last week Mr. Fish and Mr. Astor were found with Mr. Alvord, and Mr. I. I. Hayes in company with Mr. Brooks, Mr. Grady and the Tammany members in the vote on the Public Burdens bill, a bill which Mr. Fish was induced at the last moment to substitute for the original Salaries bill in his charge. The Public Burdens bill has since got a black eye. This week Mr. Fish, Mr. Astor and other republicans find themselves cordially voting with Mr. Daly, Mr. Fitzgerald and other anti-Tammany members in favor of the Croton Water bill, a measure advocated by the Commissioner of Public Works and decidedly opposed by Mr. Kelly. Mr. Alvord still sticks to Tammany, being disposed to advocate home rule for New York as represented by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Mr. Fish seems now inclined to dispel the notion that he is affiliated with either junto of the common political enemy. He took pains to-day to explain himself to this effect, and it is presumed that when the amended Public Burdens bill returns to the Assembly from the Senate, the Chairman of the Committee on Cities will not be unwilling to consider it in a new guise.

In a despatch last week which summarized and reviewed the most important New York bills passed or pending in the Assembly and on their way to the Senate it was intimated that all or most of them would be subjected to jealous scrutiny and considerable amendment. This view is sustained by the activity of both the friends and opponents of these bills and by the expressions of Senators and members of the lower House. The Public Burdens bill, the Finance bill, the Bonded Indebtedness bill and the Dock Department bill have all to run a gantlet of uncertainty, in which each is likely to receive excoriations more or less severe.

ALVORD'S APPORTIONMENT BILL.

Fairly driven to bay on the Apportionment bill Mr. Alvord when the bill came up this morning for its final reading promptly moved the previous question in order to shut off further debate upon it. He withdrew his motion for a moment only, at the request of Mr. Brooks, who thus got an opportunity to move that the bill be recommitted to the committee whence it came with instructions to report it back in the form of two bills, separating the Assembly and Senate apportionments, at the same time taking one member of the Assembly from Washington and one from Wayne county and giving the two to the county of New York. This motion was rejected by the following vote:—

YEAS—Messrs. Allen, Baker, Bathe, Bergen, Berrigan, Bouck, Brooks, Browning, Burns, Clancy, Cormack, Cosad, Crawford, Crowley, Curran, Daly, Day, Douglass, Fitzgerald, Floyd-Jones, Flynn, Frank, Galvin, Grady, Halliday, Hamilton, Havens, J. Hayes, Henry, Keegan, Kellogg, Langner, Loveland, Mapes, McDonough, Mead, Moller, Meyenborg, Neilson, Nelson, Niven, Pattengill, Patterson, C. C. Peck, Piper, Purdy, Roberts, Searing, Seebacher, Shanley, Sliter, Strack, J. Taylor, Thain, Thomson, Wemple and Willerd—57.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Alvord, Andrews, Astor, Berry, Brundage, Case, Chappell, Chase, Clapp, J. M. Clark, Crandall, Deyoe, Duell, Fish, Foster, Gilbert, Graham, Griggs, I. I. Hayes, Hepburn, Hobbie, Holbrook, Hoyt, Hume, Hurd, Jones, Keator, Kern, King, Lowing, Mattison, Mekeel, J. H. Miller, S. V. R. Miller, Moores, North, Noyes, Palmer, Parker, De Witt C. Peck, Peek, Pool, Prescott, Proper, Reynolds, Rowland, Sanger, Sewell, Sheard, Sheldon, Skinner, Story, Sutherland, E. Taylor, Terry, Valentine, Wadsworth, Wakely, Waring, Wheeler, Wilbor, Williams, Willis, Winch and Worth—66.

ABSENT, PAIRED AND NOT VOTING—Messrs. Beard, Converse, Holahan, Townsley and the Speaker—5.

PASSAGE OF THE MEASURE.

The vote was then taken on the passage of the bill. During its progress Mr. Beard, one of the members nominated by the labor reformers, used up the brief time allowed him to explain his vote in denouncing the bill and intimating his contempt for both the regular party organizations. "You may cut up your district lands as you please," said Mr. Beard, "but next fall we'll take care of the votes for you." The bill was at length passed by a vote of 67 to 59, the republicans all voting for it and the democrats and labor reformers against it.

NEW YORK BILLS.

The rest of the day in the Assembly was occupied in the discussion of measures relating to the city of New York. Two bills, one providing for the repavement of streets, the other for an additional supply of Croton water in that city, provided a warm and entertaining discussion between Tammany and anti-Tammany democrats, in which some of the most prominent republicans, including Mr. Alvord, Mr. Fish and Mr. Astor were led to join.

MORE CROTON WATER FOR GOTHAM.

The Croton Water bill repeals an act of 1875 which granted leave to the Commissioner of Public Works to expend an additional sum, not exceeding $1,500,000, with an amendment providing that in the expenditure of that sum he may construct a pump to supply water at higher levels in parts of the city, such as the Nineteenth and Twenty-first wards, where the water service has hitherto been deficient. That the bill may be fully understood the vital section (a rescript of the law of 1875, with the amendment in italics) is given herewith:—

SECTION 2.—The Commissioner of Public Works of the city of New York, when thereunto authorized by a three-fourths vote of all the members elected to the Common Council of said city, to be approved by the Mayor of said city, is hereby authorized to expend, for materials and labor and other services, in such manner as the said Commissioner shall deem for the best interests of said city, in laying pipes to extend and enlarge the distribution of Croton water throughout the city of New York, including the two new wards, and to furnish a sufficient supply thereof to the institutions in charge of the Department of Public Charities and Correction, located on Blackwell's Island, Ward's Island and Randall's Island, and in laying mains and erecting or constructing such structures and fixtures as the said Commissioner of Public Works may deem necessary to deliver said water at higher levels and in greater quantities, an additional sum not exceeding $1,500,000.

OBJECTS OF THE BILL—CAMPBELL'S EXPLANATION.

This bill and its amendment would appear innocent enough. The object was explained by Superintendent Campbell last month in a communication to the Mayor, in this wise:—

Under this law (the Law of 1875) about $800,000 has been expended, and a large amount of water pipe laid, nearly all within the past two years, but up to this time nothing has been done under the law to carry out one of its most important objects, as expressed in its title—viz., "to deliver water at a higher elevation."

The great necessity of some proper works and appliances for this purpose was more especially apparent during the droughts of 1876 and 1877, when many houses situated on elevated ground were deprived of water in their upper stories, and in some instances even in the basements. My quarterly reports to you contain frequent allusions to the matter of what is technically called a "high service supply." Many citizens who are inconvenienced by want of sufficient pressure at their premises have made earnest appeals for the extension of the high service water now pumped up near Manhattanville, but this water has already been distributed to the utmost capacity of the works at that point. Accordingly, early last year I prepared an ordinance to be submitted to the Common Council authorizing the erection of the necessary pumping engines on the land which had been expressly reserved for these works, between Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth streets, when that part of the aqueduct was taken down; but upon submitting it to the Corporation Counsel I was advised that the authority under the law to do more than lay pipes was doubtful, and that an amendment by the Legislature would be advisable, in order to provide for the distribution of water at higher elevation. The words of the amendment were inserted in the Corporation Counsel's office as follows:—"And erecting or constructing such structures and fixtures as the said Commissioner of Public Works may deem necessary" to deliver said water at higher levels, &c. This amended bill was introduced in the Assembly last session, with your approval, and, indeed, without dissent from any one. It passed the Assembly almost unanimously, and was only lost in the Senate for want of time.

The amendment is a proper one and properly worded, if the original intent of the law is to be carried out. It would be as unnecessary in such a law to describe the engines and pumps to be erected as it would to specify the diameter of pipes to be laid. This will be done in the ordinances of the Common Council (a three quarters vote being necessary), approved by the Mayor, without which no work of any kind under this law can be undertaken. The total expenditure is still limited to $1,500,000, of which not exceeding $500,000 can be spent in any one year. The balance yet unexpended is $700,000. The cost of the pumping engines and necessary structures will not exceed $200,000. This sum is more than ample for the purpose, and considering the great benefit to be accomplished, and that the law of 1875 by its title intended to provide for this high service, it does not seem unreasonable that $200,000 out of $1,500,000 authorized should be devoted to this purpose.

TAMMANY'S OPPOSITION TO "HIGH SERVICE."

Notwithstanding this explanation the bill is this year opposed by Comptroller Kelly and other New York city authorities connected with Tammany Hall on the ostensible ground that its language is not sufficiently specific and restrictive, but rather "loose and indefinite," and on the inference that more money and a further issue of bonds will become necessary for carrying out all the objects and purposes. This was the position taken by Mr. Brooks, Mr. Grady, Mr. Thain and other opponents of the bill to-day. Mr. Grady went even further, and said that the main purpose of the bill was to add to the patronage of the Superintendent of Public Works. Inasmuch as Mr. Campbell is supposed to act independently of Tammany Hall, and is the same Scotchman whom Mr. Grady spoke of the other day as "wanting to found a new party on a block of Scotch granite," it was easy to see that here was where the shoe bill pinched hardest.

PASSAGE OF THE BILL.

Mr. Daly, who introduced the bill, preserved an admirable temper against a good deal of nagging, and, in spite of Mr. Alvord and with the cordial assistance of Mr. Fish and Mr. Astor, carried it successfully, even triumphantly through. Mr. Astor, who spoke for the second time since his appearance in the Assembly, confined himself to a simple statement that he had attentively examined the bill and was convinced that it was an excellent and necessary measure. Mr. Moller, of Westchester, also spoke in its favor. The support it received generally grew out of a feeling of confidence on the part of country members in a bill authorizing an expenditure only on the approval of the Common Council and the Mayor of the city, and out of a kind of suppressed resentment of what was spoken of as the "factious interference" of Tammany members.

FACTS.

In the course of his remarks to-day on the Croton Water bill Mr Daly introduced, in defence of Commissioner Campbell, the following comparative statement of expenditures of the Department of Public Works from 1871 to 1877 inclusive:—

	1871.	1872.	1873.
On account of appropriations raised by taxation	$3,175,192	$1,804,467	$1,492,631
On account of assessment funds for street improvements	5,448,429	2,322,137	4,295,862
On account of funded debt for improvement and extension of water supply, &c.	3 137,469	1,699,507	1,859,343
Totals	$11,761,091	$5,826,112	$7,647,836

	1874.	1875.
On account of appropriations raised by taxation	$1,627,165	$1,763,951
On account of assessment funds for street improvements	4,582,572	3,408,684
On account of funded debt for improvement and extension of water supply, &c.	1,399,393	747,116
Totals	$7,609,131	$5,919,752

	1876.	1877.
On account of appropriations raised by taxation	$1,451,023	$1,616,035
On account of assessment funds for street improvements	2,018,680	735,130
On account of funded debt for improvement and extension of water supply, &c.	888.390	737,597
Totals	$4,358,095	$3,088,763

REPAVEMENT OF STREETS AND AVENUES.

The next bill, to provide for a uniform system for the repavement of streets, avenues and public places in the city of New York, reads thus:—

SECTION 1. Whenever the Commissioner of Public Works, of the city of New York, shall certify and report to the Board of Aldermen, of said city, that the safety, health or convenience of the public requires the repavement of any streets, avenues or public places in said city, said Board of Aldermen shall have the power to direct, by ordinance or resolution, the repavement of said streets, avenues or public places in the manner specified and of the materials approved of and recommended by the said Commissioner of Public Works, which work shall be done by and under the direction of the Department of Public Works, according to law.

The cost of repaving the streets, avenues or public places, in accordance with the provisions of the above requirement, shall be borne by a general assessment upon all the taxable property in the city, and shall be included in the estimate of the Department of Public Works, and shall be appropriated by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, certified by the Comptroller, according to law, and inserted and included in the annual tax levies, and raised and collected by tax upon the estates subject to taxation in the city and county of New York, provided that the amount so appropriated and raised shall not exceed the sum of $500,000 in any one single year. In case any of the streets, avenues or public places in said city shall have been once paved, and the expense thereof assessed upon the owners of adjoining and benefited property, the Common Council may, by ordinance, direct the said streets, avenues or public places to be repaved under the direction of the Department of Public Works, upon a petition of two-thirds of the owners of the property to be assessed, who shall also be the owners of two-thirds of the feet fronting on the line of the proposed improvement, and the assessment therefor shall be levied and collected on the property fronting on the line of the improvement, in the manner usual for assessments to be levied and collected in accordance with law.

The signatures to the petitions for repavement, as herein provided, shall be verified before any official duly authorized to take acknowledgments to be used in the State of New York.

In explanation of this bill Superintendent Campbell says:—

Before the passage of the law of 1875, which authorizes the repavement of streets, to the extent of $500,000 annually (if so much shall be appropriated by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment), all of which is to be assessed on the city at large, the work of repavement had been done under ordinances of the Common Council, and the cost thereof was assessed upon the property benefited. It was not supposed that this old law was repealed by the law of 1875, and my predecessor made some contracts for repavement, under the old law, when the Corporation Counsel decided that these contracts were invalid, the law under which repavement had been done by special assessment being abrogated by the law of 1875.

When I entered upon the duties of my office many applications were made by citizens for the repavement of streets represented to be in a condition seriously affecting the interests of property owners and residents on their line, but no appropriation for repavement having been made, either for 1875 or 1876, their requests could not be complied with. These citizens then desired to repave their streets under the former law, the cost to be assessed upon their property. On learning that this was not admissible, the law having been repealed, there seemed to be no remedy but to appeal to the Legislature for the restoration of the original law, so that they could cure the evil of bad pavements by having the cost assessed upon their property.

Accordingly such a bill was introduced by the parties interested in 1876, and again in 1877, but failed to pass. The bill introduced this session is an exact transcript of the printed bill of last year. The objectionable clause, about the confirmation of previous contracts, doubtless referred to those contracts which had been entered into in good faith, as above explained, and upon which some work had been done before it was discovered that they were made invalid by the law of 1875, but the language was too vague, and not being necessary to the real object of the law—namely, to authorize the repavement of streets by assessments on the property fronting thereon, and on the application of the owners of two-thirds of such front—was stricken out of the bill as reported.

The simple question is, Shall citizens be authorized to to have their streets repaved by paying for it themselves if they deem it to their interest to do so? New streets now receive their first pavement in this manner by petition and ordinance, and there seems to be no objection to repaving in the same manner.

WHY MR. KELLY OPPOSES IT.

But this bill is also strenuously opposed by Comptroller Kelly, who says there is no limit to the expenditures which might be incurred under its provisions, and which might and would, most probably, have to be paid ultimately by the city to redeem the assessment bonds which it would be necessary to issue to pay the cost of the works. No reliance whatever, says the Comptroller, can be placed upon the collection of assessments for such repaving, if the bill should become a law, to pay the assessment bonds at maturity. He concedes that the appropriation of $300,000 for repaving and $150,000 for repairing streets, made by the Board of Apportionment during the present year, is ample for the purpose and makes any amendment for the act for repaving the streets quite unnecessary.

LAID ON THE TABLE.

Mr Brooks and Mr. Grady advocated the same views and objected, moreover, to that part of the bill which proposes to legalize not only every contract, "but every proceeding" of what kind soever that may have been entered into or taken by any department of the city government prior to the year 1877, relating to the repavement of streets, avenues and public places, and makes it mandatory on the officers of the department to execute and carry into effect any such contract or proceeding, carrying with it corresponding obligation on the Finance Department to provide for the whole expense that may be incurred or involved. Mr. Daly addressed himself vigorously to the task of dissipating the objections; but, the hour of the daily recess being near at hand, the bill was for a time laid on the table.

IRON TELEGRAPH POLES FOR NEW YORK.

Mr. Astor's so-called Iron Telegraph Pole bill—literally entitled "An act to provide against the use of unsuitable and dangerous telegraph poles in the city of New York"—was passed in the Assembly to-day after a brisk debate. It was at the suggestion of President Orton that the bill was made to apply to New York alone, and that the third section was so worded as to postpone the operation of the act until May 1 of next year. The bill is of sufficient public interest to be given entire:—

SECTION 1.—Whenever, in the city of New York, it shall hereafter be found necessary or desirable by the authorities thereof, or by any telegraph company or association, or any other person or persons authorized to erect, set or reset and use telegraph poles or posts for the support of telegraph wires, in the streets, avenues, parks or other public places of said city, to erect, set or reset such telegraph poles or posts, such erection, setting or resetting shall not be made or done without the written permission of the Commissioner of Public Works of said city; and all such poles or posts hereafter to be erected, set or reset, shall be of iron and made according to such specifications as to dimensions, weight and construction, as shall be approved by said Commissioner, but no iron pole patented prior to the passage of this Act shall be adopted. And it shall not be lawful hereafter for any municipal department, board or other municipal officer, or any telegraph company or association, corporate or otherwise, or any other person or persons to erect, set or reset any wooden telegraph pole or post in the streets, avenues or public places of said city, nor any other kind or description of telegraph pole or post than such as are required and approved as aforesaid.

SEC. 2.—It shall be the duty of the said Commissioner to cause to be made, as often as he may deem proper, an inspection of all the telegraph poles or posts erected in said city for the use and support of telegraph wires, and ascertain and determine the condition of the same as to safety, stability and soundness; and in all cases when such poles or posts or any of them may be deemed by the said commissioner unsafe, unsound or insecure the party or parties owning or using the same, on notice from said Commissioner, shall remove the same, and substitute in place thereof such poles as said Commissioner shall approve, and if, after five days or such longer notice as may seem proper to said Commissioner, such party or parties shall neglect or refuse to make such removal, the said Commissioner may remove the same at the expense of such party or parties, who shall be liable therefor in an action to be brought by the city; and when such telegraph poles or posts so to be removed are used by any department or other authority or officer of such city it shall be the duty of such department, authority or officer to remove the same on being notified aforesaid by said Commissioner, but in case of failure to do so such removal shall be made by said Commissioner. It shall be the duty of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of said city to provide for the payment of such expenditures as shall be properly incurred in carrying out the provisions of this act.

ABANDONMENT OF CHILDREN.

Mr. Andrews has introduced in the Assembly a bill which provides that whenever a parent has abandoned or shall abandon an infant child, such parent shall be deemed to have forfeited all claim that he or she would otherwise have, as to the custody of such child or otherwise, against any person who has taken, adopted and assumed the maintenance of such child, and in such case the person adopting, taking and assuming the maintenance of such child, may adopt it under the provisions of this act, with the same effect as if the consent of such parents had been obtained. In all cases of abandonment after this act takes effect the person adopting shall proceed under the provisions of this act within one year after he or she has assumed the maintenance of such child; in such case of abandonment the County Judge may make the order provided for in this act without the consent of such parent or parents.

THAT VEXATIOUS CODE.

This morning a hot passage was had between the President and Mr. Jacobs, of Kings, to which the gavel put an end ere it had time to fully develop. Senator Edict introduced a concurrent resolution appointing a new commission to revise the statutes, and on one of the most important amendments made to the resolution Mr. Dorsheimer put the previous question with great haste, omitting in his anxiety to say, "Is the Senate ready for the question?" Senator Jacobs said that the question on the amendment was not properly carried; that the Chair should have made the announcement quoted above. The Chair said that when it needed instructions it would send to the Senator from the Third. Mr. Jacobs responded that he very much regretted that he found it necessary to instruct the Chair when he was not asked. The sharp whang of the gavel cut Mr. Jacobs short and business was proceeded with. The resolutions under which this little tiff took place and which are not disassociated with an alleged effort to coerce the Governor into making certain nominations, read as amended as follows:—

First—Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That a joint committee of the Legislature be appointed, three from the Senate (by the President thereof), three from the Assembly (by the Speaker thereof), to sit during the recess to examine and review the Code of Civil Procedure, and also all bills submitted at this session by the Commissioners to revise the statutes and to report the result at the next session of the Legislature.

Second—That the said committee be at liberty, if they think proper, to report a bill either amending the Code of Civil Procedure or consisting of a new Code of Civil Procedure, or the Code of 1849; also one or more bills embodying, with such alterations and amendments as they think proper, the additional bills submitted by the said Commissioners at this session, and repealing so much of the present statutes of the State as are obsolete or superseded thereby, and such temporary or supplemental bills as may be necessary or proper, and any other bills which they may deem expedient, having for their object the revision, consolidation and simplification of the statutes.

Third—That each bill so reported be reported in print, and a copy thereof be furnished to each member of the Legislature, and thereupon that the said bill be placed upon the calendar of general orders in each house, in like manner and with like effect as if reported favorably by a standing committee of such house, and be acted upon without being again printed.

Fourth—That for the purpose of carrying this resolution into effect the said joint committee be authorized to employ such assistants, counsel and clerks, and to incur such reasonable expenses as they think proper for travelling, office rent, books, printing, postage, stationery and other incidental matters, but the whole expense not to exceed $15,0 0.

SENT TO THE ASSEMBLY.

The resolutions gave rise to considerable debate. Mr. Marvin said that it was an infamy further to tamper with the rules of practice. The Senate now had it in its power to relieve the country of confusion by abolishing the first thirteen chapters of the new code, as the Governor suggested, or to override the last nine chapters over the veto. Mr. Jacobs moved to table the resolution, which was voted down, 15 to 10. Senators Harris and McCarthy both spoke against the resolutions, which were finally carried and sent to the Assembly.

WANT IT REPEALED.

A committee of the New York Bar consisting of ex-Judge James C. Spencer, ex-Judge E. L. Fancher, Samuel G. Courtney, General Crooks and A. P. Sprague, the writer on international codification, were here to-day to advocate the repeal of the new Code. They will be granted a hearing by the Judiciary Committee of the House on Tuesday evening next. They state that memorials asking for the repeal of the new Code have been signed by about two thousand lawyers, and that it is rumored that a general convention of the legal profession of the State will soon be called to consider the question of repeal.

DISCUSSING "FREE CANAL TRANSPORTATION."

The Assembly occupied itself after the recess with a discussion of the canal measures, which were made the special order. Mr. De Witt C. Peck, of Oswego; Mr. Graham, of Orange; Mr. Noyes, of Cayuga, and others opposed the concurrent resolutions looking to a constitutional amendment making the canals of the State free to commerce. Mr. Peck's line of argument may be taken as a sample. He opposed a proposition which tended to endanger the railroad interest, the coal interest and other vital interests deeply concerning the prosperity of the whole State. The whole commercial problem had undergone a change since the introduction of the Bessemer steel. Before that wrought iron rails were too soft and weak to allow the transit of heavy locomotives and freight trains over mountains. Now the Alleghanies, formerly the principal obstacles to railroad transit and traffic, were rendered passable by steel rails, and furnished within their own bowels the fuel necessary to enable steam engines to cross them. By means of the railroads parts of the State were penetrated and laid open for commerce which could never be reached by canals. The canals and the railroads were natural allies, and although the canals compared with the railroads were passé, they were important factors in the general interests of the Commonwealth. Ably managed the canals and the railroads, which had hitherto operated to the injury of the agricultural districts, would serve to increase their prosperity. But those districts ought not be taxed for the maintenance of either. Mr. Peck was of the opinion that if we were ever to have free canals it must be through some provision by the general government, and that so long as the State showed an inclination to move in the matter the general government would refrain.

DR. HAYES SPEAKS AGAIN.

After Mr Graham had spoken Mr. Hayes made a general defence of the measure. Said he:—The total exports of grain from all United States ports to all foreign countries was, in 1871, 56,143,166 bushels, and in 1876, 125,959,601 bushels, being a gain of 69,816,435 bushels—an increase equal to nearly 125 per cent. This large increase in the foreign export trade in vegetable food certainly ought to have had a perceptible beneficial influence in the trade of this State; but how was it? The total movement in vegetable food by the trunk roads and canals connecting the West with the city of New York was in 1871 3,965,471 tons, and in 1876 3,867,000 tons, an actual loss of 98,471 tons, and notwithstanding, as I have shown, there was a gain in exports equal to 125 per cent, the trade of our own State actually fell off 7 per cent! For 1877 the result was far from flattering. There was a gain of 125,667 tons in vegetable food, as compared with the previous year, but as compared with 1871 there was a gain of only 27,196 tons, or less than seven-tenths of one per cent. Do not these facts prove that the constitutional restrictions in regard to our public works are insidiously working in the interest of our rivals, and are actually retarding the growth of the State, and repelling trade which naturally should flow to us?

If our rivals had the power they would close our canals. We have not gone quite so far, but we have hedged them in with restrictions as if fearful they might damage our neighbors, or cause a greater flow of breadstuffs than actually necessary for our own wants. It is true that when our canals were projected the people were assured that ultimately they would pay the full cost of their construction, and that they never would be a source of taxation beyond their ability to return. They have already accomplished all that was promised! Grant that the people have paid in taxes, distributed through a period of thirty-four years, $35,000,000 for canal purposes, and that there is still a debt of $9,000,000 outstanding, but these sums simply represent the interest paid, and might have been realized from the business of the canals but for a disregard of the constitution. But if the canals have not directly paid their full cost they have in an indirect manner more than redeemed every pledge made for them.

COST OF THE CANALS.

The Auditor informs us that the cost of constructing all the canals amounts to $78,000,000; that the revenue has exceeded the cost of operating the canals by $86,000 000, showing that the profits of operating are $8,000,000 in excess of cost, exclusive of interest. That the indirect benefits which have accrued to the State are the sums realized by the carriers, the warehousemen and the commission merchants, from the business of the canals during the last forty years; that these sums aggregate $246,868,964, and that there are other collateral benefits which cannot be estimated. That since 1820 the aggregate valuation of the real and personal property in the State has increased $2,500,000,000, and that the population has increased nearly 3,400,000. Wonderful as these results really are, and as incredible as they may appear, they are as nothing compared with what may be realized in the future if we will exercise ordinary sagacity, be true to our own interests and employ to the best advantage the means in our possession.

PRODUCTION OF GRAIN.

It may not generally be known, but it is nevertheless true, that of all the wheat, corn, oats and rye produced in the States and Territories of the United States more than seventy per cent is grown north of the Ohio River. Pennsylvania produces thirty per cent more grain than does the State of New York and consequently requires less of Western produce for her own consumption than does the State of New York. The States bordering on the lakes of which the Erie Canal is the outlet, not including Pennsylvania and New York, according to the agricultural bureau report of crops for 1875 (if this is not the latest published, it is the latest I can obtain, and I understand the crop returns for 1877 are even larger than for 1875) from 31,874,475 acres sown to wheat, corn, oats and rye, produced 819,055,000 bushels, while three other States, with direct rail connections with Lake Michigan, from 16,885 387 acres sown produced 479,020,000 bushels, or a grand total production of 1,298,075,000. All of this vast product, which is only a minimum of producing capacity, save only what is required for local consumption, would naturally flow to the water route and through one State, if there was a demand equal to the supply.

I do not think it needful for me to say anything more in order to prove the correctness of the proposition with which I set out, that the canals of New York State have been the origin and continuance of her wealth and prosperity. I ought indeed, perhaps, to apologize for assuming that any one might seriously believe to the contrary; and most assuredly I would not, had the idea not been suggested upon this floor that certain portions of the State, while receiving benefits from her treasury, were really intent upon diverting trade to the foreign city of Montreal. It cannot be denied, however, that certain counties have interests in some measure foreign to the State. The interests of some lie with Pennsylvania and her great manufacturing centre, the greatest on this continent (Philadelphia), while others lie with Canada and the great shipping mart of Montreal. But is it not possible that we can unite upon some middle ground and all join hands for the glory of the Empire State? The counties that have been made prosperous by the canals immediately have, indirectly, contributed to the prosperity of those counties lying remote from them. Yet are they not all bound together by a common tie, a common interest and a common impulse, which is all expressed in the motto of the State, "Excelsior?"

HOW MANY RECEIVERS AND REFEREES?

Mr. Duell offered the following, which was laid over:—

Resolved, That the Clerk of the county of New York be and he is hereby directed to report to this House within ten days the names of all referees and receivers appointed in any action or proceedings in the Supreme Court of said county from the 1st day of May, 1877, to the date of his report, together with the names of the judges by whom appointed, the purpose for which the appointments were made, and, so far as he may be able, the compensation received by such referees and receivers.

AN INQUIRY.

Mr. Nelson offered the following, which was laid over:—

Whereas it is alleged that the lease of the pier and bulkhead opposite Fulton Market, East River, between Beekman and Fulton streets, was procured by fraud, bribery and corruption, and the treasury of the city of New York thereby defrauded of $100,000; therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on General Laws be and is hereby authorized to investigate as to the truth of said charge, and that they be authorised to send for persons, books and papers and report the facts to this House.

STARTLING DEFALCATION.

A FALL RIVER CORPORATION SWAMPED BY ITS TREASURER—A HALF MILLION OVERISSUE—S. ANGIER CHACE, THE ACTUAL MANAGER OF THE UNION MILLS, A CRIMINAL—FULL CONFESSION OF GUILT.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 10, 1878.

The city is in a state of intense excitement over the discovery of a heavy defalcation on the Union Mill Corporation by the Treasurer, which caused the suspension of the company to-day.

Mr S. Angier Chace is the treasurer and is also President of the Second National Bank. The Union Mill capital stands at $155,000, and the liabilities are said to be $482,000, including capital. The paper is said to be held largely by Boston banks. The most startling portion of the reports current here this morning is that Treasurer Chace is a defaulter to the amount of $480,000. The banks and other corporations are all secure as far as heard from.

HISTORY OF THE MILL.

The Union Mill Company was incorporated in 1859, with a paid in capital of $155,000—155 shares of $1,000 each. The company has about 1,100 looms and about 45,000 spindles, and employs about 500 hands, producing some 12,000,000 yards of print cloths annually. The directors are as follows:—John B. Anthony, President; Charles P. Dring, Holder B. Durfee, Foster H. Stafford, Elijah C. Kilburn, William Mason and S. Angier Chace, the latter being the defaulting treasurer. No. 1 mill was built in 1859, No. 2 in 1865, and No. 3 is now in process of erection. Although the par value of the stock is $1,000 per share, it has sold within twelve months as high as $4,000. S. Angier Chace, the defaulting treasurer and President of the Second National Bank of Fall River, has been carrying large amounts of stock of a number of Fall River corporations, and was supposed to have been somewhat involved, but has stood very high in business circles for character and ability up to the present developments. Of the operations of John B. Anthony, the president of the company, very little is known. Charles P. Dring is of the firm of Kilburn, Lincoln & Co., machinists, of Fall River, and is considered a man of considerable property.

Holder B. Durfee is president of the Narragansett Mills, and has considerable means. Foster H. Stafford is of the Davol Mills and Stafford & Co., and is called worth over $200,000. William Mason is the celebrated locomotive builder of Taunton, and is said to be worth over $500,000. The last returns showed among the prominent stockholders the following:—John B. Anthony, James M. Anthony, E. D. Anthony, M. M. Chace, S. Angier Chace, Charles P. Dring, William Mason, George T. Hathaway, James Henry and S. H. Miller.

According to the figures given above it will be seen that the liabilities of the company are largely in excess of their capital, which fact, according to the laws of Massachusetts, renders the officers and directors individually liable for the debts of the corporation, so that the chances would seem to be that the creditors of the company are in little danger of suffering any loss from the defalcation of the treasurer, but that the principal loss will fall upon the stockholders. The last quotations for the paper of the company was five and a half per cent per annum.

UNAUTHORIZED ISSUE OF NOTES.

The first intimation of anything wrong was obtained a few weeks ago when two notes of the corporation went to protest in Boston. Inquiry was made of Richardson, Hill & Co., a banking house where a good deal of the financial business was transacted, and the person who was investigating, being one of the directors, was told that such things happen to the best regulated companies. The director was not satisfied with this explanation, and stated that there was plenty of money to run the concern without issuing corporation paper, much less letting it go to protest. An investigation was set on foot and it led at length to a visit paid by this director to the treasurer in this city. Here Mr. Chace made a full and free confession that he had made a large overissue of the company's notes. Astonished at this evidence of irregularity in a man who had been so trusted, the director at once called upon his associates in the board and told his story. As a result last evening the directors held a conference which lasted all the night. A cursory examination of the treasurer's accounts was made, and this was sufficient to show that the Union Mills promissory notes had been overissued to an amount between $400,000 and $500,000.

TRUSTED AND TEMPTED.

The overissue of notes was made by Mr. Chace in a very simple way. Trusted entirely, as he was by the directors, he had full liberty as to the method of issuing the notes. Not the slightest check was put upon him, and he could simply issue them "Pay to the order of S. Angier Chace, Treasurer," indorse them and dispose of them as he saw fit. It was not necessary that the name of even one of the directors should appear upon the note, and so all control of the Treasurer's doings was virtually abandoned by the directors. Among many business men this laxity of supervision is sharply commented upon, and the stockholders in the Union Mills feel very sore about the matter.

WORTHY OF STATE PRISON.

In his confession of overissuing paper he also states this morning that he had forged the name of the corporation, issued bogus certificates, used the money for himself, forged the directors names on indorsed notes, and said, if sent to State Prison, it would be merited, and he did not care how soon he went. The directors being indorsers on a large amount of the concern's paper they will probably sacrifice everything. The mill was considered the strongest here.

FALSE FIGURES.

The last exhibit of the concern showed the following financial condition:—

Assets—Houses and land	$82 453 64
Mills, buildings and machinery	600,582 86
Cash and debts receivable	49,864 94
Manufactures, material and stock in process	176,917 43
Miscellaneous	8,000 00
Liabilities—capital stock	155,000 00
Debts	327,319 99

LIST OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Following is a list of all the stockholders and the number of shares each at that time held, the par value of shares then being $1,000 and the market price $4,000:—John B. Anthony, 8½; Ellen D. F. Anthony, 3½; James M. Anthony, 3½; Frederic A. Anthony, 1½; James Bodge, 1; James C. Boomer, Jr., 2; Mrs. E. M. Boomer, 2; Mrs. A. M. Barnard, 1; Mrs. A. M. Ball, 3; John J. Brayton, 1; S. Angier Chace, 41; M. M. Chace, 17; Edmund Chace, 2; Charles P. Dring, 6; estate of Nathan Durfee, 3; Holder B. Durfee, 3; Mary A. Fiske, 8½; William R. Gordon, 1; James Henry, 6; William S. Haines, 1; George T. Hathaway, 4; E. C. Kilburn, 5; S. H. Miller, 6; William Mason, 14; John C. Marvel, 1; S. S. Potter, 2; C. G. Remington, 1; F. H. Stafford, 3; Iram Smith, 1; Artemas Willard, 1; Thomas Wilcox & Son, 1.

WHERE THIS PAPER IS HELD.

The only Boston banks known to hold any of the questionable paper are the National Bank of Redemption, $20,000; the Blackstone National, $7,500, and the Tremont Bank, whose officers decline to name the amount held by them. It is said, however, to be small. The National Bank of Redemption, the New England Trust Company, the Webster National, State National and First National banks have in the past had large dealings with the mills, but they are short of this paper at present.

THE FIVE-CENT BANK SOUND.

Rumors having gained circulation affecting the solvency of the Five Cents Savings Bank, of which Augur Chace was president, the Bank Commissioners to-day examined its affairs and have issued a circular assuring the public of its solvency and that its surplus will amount to nearly $140,000.

EX-GOVERNOR MOSES.

A large crowd assembled in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday to listen to the argument in the habeas corpus proceedings instituted on behalf of ex-Governor Moses, of South Carolina. The argument, however, was postponed until Friday, to enable the Governor's counsel, Colonel Spencer, to prepare a traverse to the return.

FUNERAL OF FATHER COLTON.

St. Stephen's Church was crowded, yesterday morning, to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of the Rev. Father Colton, parish priest of St. Peter's Church, New Brighton, S. I. The office for the dead was chanted by Fathers Kean and Rierdon, the clergy responding, and the lessons were recited by Fathers Fitzharris, McLean and Vicar General Quinn. A solemn requiem mass was sung at the conclusion of the office, Father Hudson being the celebrant. At the close of the mass a eulogy of the deceased was pronounced by Rev. Dr. McGlynn. The body was then placed temporarily in the receiving vault beneath the church, near the altar. Among the distinguished clergy were the Right Rev. Bishop Loughlin, of Brooklyn; Dr. O'Reilly, Fathers McCready, Healy, Edwards, McLeary, Ouarus, Rogers, McDonald, Moriarty and Connolly, of Albany; McGinnis, of Boston; Father Curran and all the assistant priests of St. Stephen's and Father McShane and Maher, of the Dominican Brotherhood, with several of the Franciscan Brotherhood and the Society of Jesuits.

THE CITY DEMOCRACY.

They Hold a Mass Meeting at Cooper Institute.

EXHAUSTIVE RESOLUTIONS.

More Money for Public Works and Less for Salaries.

A mass meeting was held last night at the call of a committee of the city democracy. There were over 2,500 persons present. Their enthusiasm was unbounded, the hall ringing again and again with applause at the remarks of the speakers. A series of resolutions were adopted advocating the reduction of the salaries of city officials, the employment of the working people on the public works, the embellishing of the city, so as to attract people to it instead of driving them away; the building of houses on the vacant spots of the city so as to render real estate more valuable and enable it better to bear the burdens of taxation, and, finally, the localizing of legislation affecting the city to city officers elected by the people, so that New York should be governed by officers of its own choosing instead of being ruled by the Legislature at Albany. The speakers were John B. Haskin, Chauncey Shaffer, Simeon E. Church and James D. McClelland. The proceedings were enlivened with music by a brass band.

Mr. John B. Haskin was elected chairman of the meeting, and said it was proposed to start an organization to redeem the city from misrule and from oppressive taxation. The people should rise to a sense of impending evils, and force upon the Legislature at Albany a reduction of salaries and retrenchment in expenses. The city debt was now over $148,000,000 and the taxation $30,000,000, over $10,000,000 of which was spent in the payment of salaries. When everything else was depreciating the salaries of officials were kept at the inflated amounts of the old Ring times. A bill had been sent to the Legislature asking for the immediate reduction of city salaries twenty per cent. It was reported to the Assembly, but subsequently another bill was substituted for it giving the Board of Apportionment power to reduce the appropriations for labor $2,000,000. More labor was wanted—not less. (Applause.) It seemed as though a cabal existed in the different parties to protect themselves in public plunder from the rights of the people. The city government should be conducted on purely business principles. Mr. Haskin concluded by showing how the debt of New York city had been expanded out of all proportion with its needs and in a greater ratio than the expenses of the nation or of many other large cities in the Union.

THE VICE PRESIDENTS.

A list of vice presidents was then read, many of whom were greeted with applause. Among the names were the following:—Peter Cooper, William Cullen Bryant, Edward Cooper, Homer Morgan, Congressman Nicholas Muller, ex-Mayor Gunther, John Bigelow, John H. Sherwood, Wilson G. Hunt, John J. Townsend, Amos R. Eno, R. B Roosevelt, Henry Havemeyer, William H. Webb, ex-Judge Samuel Jones, Gustav Schwab, Vanderbilt Allen, George Law, Jr., John E. Burrill, W. H. Delancey, C. C. Colgate, David Jones, W. T. Pelton, Lawrence Turnure, James Fitzgerald, William Hurlburt, R. B. Nooney, James Daley, Nicholas Houghton, James O'Brien and over one hundred others. A list of about twenty-five secretaries was also read. The chief secretary was Alfred T. Ackert.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

After these officers had been elected Mr. Robert B. Nooney read the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:—

The "city democracy" here in mass meeting assembled reaffirm and adopt the address to them made by their Executive Committee and published in the NEW YORK HERALD of Sunday, the 17th day of February last.

The statement of facts and figures therein contained, as well as its conclusions and recommendations, are hereby approved, and we request the Legislature to promptly pass the concurrent resolution proposed for the appointment of a commission of thirteen of our fellow citizens of acknowledged honesty and capacity to report forthwith to them, for their information and action, a proper bill to reduce salaries and abolish sinecure offices, so that a real saving of at least $1,000,000 from these sources alone may in fact be made in the tax levy for this year and more than $2,000,000 next year.

Resolved, That the Public Burdens bill recently passed in the Assembly is a sham measure of reform, and intended as a fraud upon our people. That it delegates legislative power to the Board of Apportionment (believed to be an unconstitutional body not elected by the people, an emanation and creation of the Tweed Tammany Ring), which power is inherent in the State Legislature itself, and should be effectively and promptly exercised by it.

That its provisions are not mandatory, nor do they make it compulsory to reduce any salaries save the Mayor in $2,000, the Corporation Counsel and the City Chamberlain from their present exorbitant amounts to $10,000 each, and a few other salaries, amounting to over $5,000 per annum, to that sum, while unlimited power is delegated to the Board of Apportionment to diminish appropriations of the departments, preventing legitimate improvements and the employment of labor to the extent of $2,0 0,000 for the year 1879, leaving the present year and our taxpaying people to groan under the oppressive burdens of about the same aggregate taxation of the last year.

We, therefore, denounce this ill as in the interests of fraud and corruption and call upon the Senate and Governor to defeat its passage in its present shape.

Resolved, That the question of the constitutionality of the law creating and conferring legislative power and of taxation upon the Board of Apportionment, being now disputed and in controversy in the Supreme Court (its constitutionality having recently been ably contested by Mr. John J. Townsend before Mr. Justice Van Brunt), it therefore behooves the Legislature itself to act affirmatively upon the admitted and pronounced necessity for retrenchment in our municipal expenses, without evasion or attempting to delegate their own power of legislation and taxation to a political "Council of Four" not elected by the people for that purpose, and who, as recent events have shown, have formed an unholy coalition and cabal to perpetuate their own power and defeat the people of their rights of retrenchment.

Resolved, That we favor a new city charter similar in its main features to the charter of 1830, with legislative and taxing power vested in the representatives of our people in Common Council convened with the same executive power in the Mayor conferred by that charter and with spring elections as formerly existing, divested as much as possible from the baneful effects of national and State political partisanship and influence.

Resolved, That we favor a constitutional amendment prohibiting any increase of our city debt beyond $150,000,000 without a direct vote of the people sanctioning it, the State being now prohibited from incurring debt to more than $1,000,000 in any one year without the sanction of the popular vote.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the improvement and freedom of the Erie Canal, affording additional facilities for transportation, so that employment may be afforded to labor and the commercial and other interests of our city benefited thereby. That we are also in favor of the early completion of all of our municipal unfinished public works, and of the earliest possible finishing and running of all the elevated railroads throughout this county. The people who have strayed and been driven away into New Jersey and elsewhere in the vicinity of this metropolis must be induced to come back where they properly belong, and we, therefore, favor cheap as well as rapid transit. No more than five cents per passenger up to Fifty-ninth street and ten cents per passenger for any distance above there within the boundaries of the city should be permitted to be charged by the elevated or other steam roads on any of the local trains, with night trains running through or out of this city. The fare of six cents per passenger to Harlem, charged on the Third Avenue Horse Railroad, with their large dividends declared under this rate of charge, proves that the rates here indicated for elevated and other steam roads running local trains would be profitable and fully remunerative upon the honest capital invested in them. We also favor a sufficient appropriation, to be made at the present session of Congress, for the Harlem River improvement, connecting by a canal the Hudson with the East River.

Resolved, That we are opposed to the passage of the bill now before the Legislature to tax mortgages and deduct such tax by the owner of the fee from the interest accruing thereon, believing that such a law would cause capital to leave this State for investment, would prevent the loaning of money here upon bonds and mortgages, would cause the "calling in" of the principal and payment of nearly all mortgages now due, would "stop the wheels of progress" and ultimately bankrupt the city. The exemption in this bill of corporations (savings insurance companies, savings banks and others) is on a par with that existing corrupt legislation which now exempts hundreds of millions of corporation property in this city and the State, to the injury of its growth and prosperity, and the great detriment of individual owners and capitalists; we also oppose the Convict Labor bill, believing that its enforcement is detrimental to public interest and degrading to our honest, hard-working mechanics and tradesmen; we also oppose the passage of the bill introduced in the Assembly destroying the four-fifths vote on appropriations of money by our Common Council and the substitution of the two-thirds vote in the place thereof. This is a new proposition of the "cabal" in the interest of the coalition of political oligarchs now controlling the government of this city; we also oppose the passage of the unjust Apportionment bill reported by Assemblyman Alvord, by which this city and Brooklyn will be cheated out of seven additional members of the Legislature to which they are honestly entitled, and we favor the immediate passage of a just bill of apportionment; we also oppose the bill introduced by Senator Hogan, creating a special commission—the Mayor, Comptroller, Agnew, Van Nort and Barker—to pave Fifth avenue. This looks like a job. No commission is necessary. This avenue and others require paving, their paving would give needed employment to labor; but this should be done under existing law by the proper department of the city government having charge of such works.

Resolved, That the taxpayers of our city require the use of their money taken in taxes and assessments applied in profitable expenditures on public works, which shall tend among other things to give employment to the mechanics and laboring poor who are anxious and willing to work, but prevented by and in the interests of cormorant office holders. We insist on the immediate reduction of the city payrolls in at least twenty-five per cent from the enormous salaries now being paid, and repeat, "The expenses of the city government of New York weigh too heavily upon thousands of our people to be tolerated much longer. The spectacle of useless office-holders maintained out of the public purse to serve the political ambition of the head of a political club is arousing a deep and general indignation, which rows with every fresh revelation of the spirit in which the affairs of New York city are conducted."

Resolved, That the immense debt of this city—net nearly $123,000,000 after deducting the amount now in the sinking fund (interest, however, being paid this year, calculated at six per cent, on over $150,000,000) a first mortgage upon the property of every taxpayer, about $123 of debt in principal upon every man, woman and child of our population, and the annual tax roll of about $30,000,000, or a tax on the head of every man, woman and child living here of about $28 each, should be immediately reduced from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000; so that the property of our citizens may not be confiscated; so that rents may be reduced; so that the commissariat of the dominant party organizations may be curtailed of supplies, by which onerous and exorbitant party assessments of $10,000 and under for each candidate nominated may be destroyed; so that worth, honesty and capacity may be rewarded by the popular will; so that each democrat may have a voice and a vote, unpurchased and unpurchaseable, by which his individuality and manhood may be recognized and felt, in accordance with the letter and spirit of a true democratic government and in opposition to the existing oligarchy of officeholders now controlling a so-called democratic organization in this city, dictated to and ruled by an autocrat. With these principles and measures in view, we call upon every independent citizen throughout the city to enroll himself in the different Assembly districts, at the primary meetings called for the 17th inst., as a member of "The City Democracy," to redeem this metropolis from the misrule, the extravagant and bad government under which it now groans.

CHAUNCEY SHAFFER'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Chauncey Shaffer was introduced, and said:—Fellow citizens and fellow sufferers—I find myself in a strange place talking politics. I am not here now to quarrel with Tammany Hall. In the government of this city there are some personally honest men. Why is it that we look upon them as our enemies? The reason is that they eat up our substance. No man need tell me that New York requires the dictation that is paralyzing the arm of labor and bringing evidences of decay upon our city. There is something wrong all over, down and up, criss-cross and cross-criss. I can remember when public men guarded public money, when economy in the administration of our city government was a virtue and not a mere thing to be talked about, when promises of reform were made to be kept and men in office were required to earn their money. This state of things had its origin in one of the worst cyclones of corruption that ever swept over this land. A combination was formed, the centre of which was one man born to a higher destiny, a man who should not be where he now is though he is where he ought to be. (Laughter and applause.) As Mr. Tweed stepped out another man stepped in. I had great hopes then for this city. He made a good Sheriff—when he hung a man he did it like a gentleman. He assumes the authority to control the affairs of this city. He can't go through on that line. If Mr. Kelly were to make the effort to disengage himself from the men that surround him and are fattening on these salaries he would lose his power. They must all hang together or some of them will hang separately. A man who wants to retain power must do right and let the people control and carry out the will of the people and the people will stick to him. (Applause.) When strength was failing at home a necessity was created for more friends. We find some of Mr. Kelly's friends doing what? Voting to sustain in office a man who has openly, flagrantly violated the express statutes of the State and robbed the state of some $70,000, and we find some power developed in Albany to sustain a republican in office, surrendering their leader with all his influence to the life long adversaries of that leader. The country democracy are inquiring, Where is the democratic party of New York? Did it die when its three representatives from Tammany Hall died, with some sixteen republicans on the floor of the capital? Who ever saw nineteen graves dug so quickly without spades before? (Applause and laughter.) I find another thing. A petition went up from this city for relief from the terrible burden of taxation. We find Mr. Alvord treating the petition as a light thing and saying that the Legislature did not want to be bothered with it. Why did he say so? "These gentlemen, whose salaries are to be affected have saved us in saving our representative from expulsion from office, and we will carry out our part of the bargain now and won't burden ourselves with the New York taxpayers." I am afraid there has been a bargain between the men fattening in Tammany Hall and those fattening in Albany.

OTHER SPEECHES.

Mr. Simeon E. Church next spoke. He was opposed to reducing expenses by stopping the public works and keeping the salaries to their high standard. It would be like a farmer who sold all his implements and ruined his farm in order to pay off a mortgage with it. If property were improved by being built upon it would render real estate more valuable and would lessen the ratio of taxation so that it would be easier for people to live upon it. More people should be attracted to New York instead of driving them away. Mr. Church especially advocated the paving of the uptown city districts and the raising of the Croton water level so that the water could be carried to the highest rooms in all the houses. This could be done by reducing the salaries, and the rate of taxation would be one and a quarter per cent instead of two and a half as at present.

A letter from Mr. William H. Morrell favoring the object of the meeting was read and received with demonstrations of approval.

Mr. James D. McClellan spoke briefly on the troubles at present existing especially among the poorer classes, who were in absolute want.

Mr. Haskins announced that primaries will be held on the 17th to elect delegates to choose a general committee. The meeting then adjourned.

NEW JERSEY ELECTIONS.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORIES IN JERSEY CITY AND HOBOKEN—THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES.

F. Morris, republican, 1,032; Rowe's majority, 6.

For the Board of Public Works the vote was as follows:—First district—William Clarke, democrat, 1,203; W. B. Shaffer, republican, 817; E. McLaughlin, independent democrat, 234; Clarke's plurality, 152 Second district—Garrett Haley, democrat, 1,518; M. O'Gready, independent democrat, 958; J. Rinbrand, republican, 54; Haley's plurality, 506. Third district—John McLaughlan, democrat, 1,181; Thomas Edmonston, republican, 1,086; McLaughlan's majority, 95.

For Fire Commissioner the votes were as follows:—First district—John McDonough, democrat, 1,255; William Fisher, republican, 891; Martin Delaney, independent democrat, 53. McDonough's plurality, 311. Fourth district—Edward O'Donnell, democrat, 1,258; Alfred Heritage, republican, 692. O'Donnell's majority, 566. Sixth district—S. M. Ayars, republican, 1,112; Bernard Keill, democrat, 1,019. Ayars' majority, 93.

For Police Commissioners:—Second district—David C. Joyce, 1,254; Patrick Malone, independent democrat, 1,238; James Laming, republican, 110 Joyce's majority, 16. Fifth district—J. Q. Bird, republican, 1,025; E. V. Burke, democrat, 740. Bird's majority, 288. Sixth district—Fred Wright, democrat, 1,087; W. R. Mason, republican, 1,033. Wright's majority, 54. The Freeholders elected are:—First district—James Conroy, democrat, 263 majority; J. F. W. Maugel, democrat, 391 majority. Second district—Michael Desmond, democrat, 456 majority; Bernard McCarthy, democrat, 492 majority. Third district—H. M. Eddy, republican, 166 majority; Horace Schermerhorn, 188 majority. Fourth district—James Pallister, 343 majority; William Moller, 265 majority. Fifth district—W. R. Headden, republican, 82 majority; William Frost, republican, 124 majority. Sixth district—John Bull, democrat, 45 majority; Abram Rapp, 59 majority. Seventh district—Timothy Foley, democrat, and Ramon Cook, independent democrat, are elected, and in the Eighth district Peter Hauck, democrat, and James G. Morgan, democrat, are elected by over 1,200 majority.

The different municipal boards will stand as follows:—Board of Aldermen, democrats, 9; republicans, 3; Board of Education, democrats, 8; republicans, 4; Board of Works, 6 democrats; Board of Police Commissioners, 5 democrats and 1 republican; Board of Fire Commissioners, 5 democrats and 1 republican; County Board of Freeholders, 12 democrats, 4 republicans and 1 independent democrat.

In Hoboken E V. S. Besson was elected Mayor without opposition. The other officers elected were:—R. H. Alberts, City Clerk; Auguste Beute, Treasurer; John Doerley, Assessor; John McMahon, Collector; Thomas H. Niven, Councilman-at-Large, and Samuel Webb, John Curtin and Gustav Streng to the Council. L. D. Elder was elected Tax Commissioner and Bernhard Bayer Commissioner of Appeals.

A DILEMMA AT HARRISON.

Judge of Election Edward Grace, and Inspectors Francis McCue and Thomas Keegan, of the First ward of Harrison, visited Newark yesterday and sought legal advice in regard to a dilemma in which a furious row at the election on Tuesday placed them. The contest for Alderman in the ward was very exciting. It was also very close. The regular democratic nominee was Philip Cairns, his opponent being John Sullivan, who ran on "the Citizen's ticket." When the polls closed the judges, inspectors and a select number of citizens retired to a private room in the saloon where the election had been held and witnessed the count. At the close, but before the debits and credits had been counted up, Sullivan had three majority. Contrary to the request of the election officers, Mr. Mulligan, President of the Town Council, left the room, leaving the door open, and announced the result to the crowd. A disgraceful scene followed. The crowd smashed into the room, assaulted the election officers, seized the ballot box, ballot and tally sheets and destroyed them. For hours they kept up a regular riot, the officers of the law being powerless to compel order. Finally the rowdies exhausted themselves and then there was peace. Cairns claims to have been elected by five majority, while Sullivan claims the election by three majority. According to advice of counsel given yesterday the election officers will not certify to the election of either, and a new election will have to be ordered. Aside from the disgraceful proceedings and the outrage on law nobody was hurt, and no damage was done. Harrison is proverbial for election day scrimmages.

WEDDED FOES.

Anna Newell Charges Her Husband with Infidelity.

HER DIVORCE SUIT.

The Testimony of an Alleged Particeps Criminis.

LORENZO AND CANDACE.

Since the famous Forrest suit there has not been a divorce trial in this city in which the alleged particeps criminis was placed on the witness stand until the commencement of the trial yesterday, before Judge Lawrence, holding Supreme Court, Circuit, of the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Anna Newell against her husband, Lorenzo D. Newell. What induced this particular course was the institution of a cross suit for divorce brought by Mr. Newell against his wife. The previous publicity given to these cross actions, coupled with the prominence of the litigants, and especially the claim made by Mrs. Newell of being the leading beneficiary in the will of the late millionnaire, William H. Boardman, of Boston, and her efforts in the latter city to substantiate in the courts the legality of this claim, in which General Benjamin F. Butler figured as her leading counsel, very naturally induced a large attendance on the opening yesterday of the trial for divorce. The plaintiff is represented by ex-Judge Fullerton, Charles P. Crosby, Henry Ten Eyck and Colonel John R. Fellows, and the defendant by Ira Shafer and Messrs. Arnold, Elliott & White.

THE PARTIES TO THE SUIT.

Mrs. Newell, who is now apparently about thirty-five years of age, is a native of Boston, where she lived until her marriage with Mr. Newell, on June 6, 1865. The late William H. Boardman, who during his lifetime was most prominent among the wealthy men of Boston and held a high social position in that city, being attracted by her beauty and sprightliness, adopted her as his daughter. The history of her litigation as a claimant under Mr. Boardman's will has already been fully published and stands as a cause célèbre in the court records of Boston. She is still a magnificent-looking woman, although somewhat worn by the long years of sharply contested litigations. She is stately in stature, of fine figure and commanding presence. Her hair is of raven blackness, and from her piercing dark eyes there flashed keen intelligence. Her complexion is faultlessly clear and when she smiled, as she did occasionally during the giving of the testimony, her face radiated with a charming witchery, although her general expression in repose is one of marked placidity and firm determination. She was dressed in deep black. By accident or design one of the edges of her short crêpe veil had fallen on her forehead, giving to her a rather dashing expression, the effect of which was decidedly unique. She whispered suggestions occasionally to her counsel, but during most of the time was occupied in writing, as if taking down the testimony of the witnesses. She was evidently wholly engrossed in the suit, and, although the cynosure of the compactly crowded court room, gave little heed to their prying glances.

Mr. Newell is a well known importer of millinery goods in this city, having carried on this business here for a good many years. His appearance indicates that he is fully ten years the senior of his wife. He has scant iron gray hair, blue eyes, mustache and whiskers, the latter being of a light brown color. Whether his expression was real or assumed it would be impossible, of course, to tell; but he certainly did not appear in the least disconcerted. His dress was that of a business man—plain, but in no manner outré in fashion or quality. The two sat within a short distance of one another, but interchanged no glances of recognition. In fact, it was evident that each rather sought to avoid seeing the other.

CHARGES AND COUNTER CHARGES.

Already the charges and counter charges in this suit are a more than thrice told tale, the matter within the past few months having frequently come before the courts in various interlocutory motions, including a heated controversy as to the examination of certain witnesses in Boston as to the alleged infidelities of Mrs. Newell. The husband was the first to enter the legal arena in his suit for divorce, and then, as is frequently the case, she did not alone content herself with flatly denying his allegations, but retaliated by bringing charges of infidelity against him. They lived together till June 20, 1875; then the little unpleasantness engendered by recriminations resulted in their separation. Outlining the entire case would entail recitals repulsive in character. Briefly epitomized, he charges her with having committed adultery with William H. Boardman, with Colonel J. F. Pickering, a lawyer of Boston, who at one time was her counsel, and with unknown persons. Most of the evidence bearing on her alleged infidelities was elicited through special detectives, employed as stated to keep a watchful look upon her at the different boarding houses where she lived in Boston. Her story touching the alleged unfaithfulness of her husband is very briefly told. She charges him with various adulteries with Miss Candace M. Olney, a fashionable milliner, whose place of business is at No. 30 East Fourteenth street. She charges that after forming a liaison with this lady in this city he met her abroad on two occasions and that they jointly took the tour of Europe, taking en route the British metropolis, the gay French capital and other prominent European cities. It is hardly necessary to state, of course, that these counter allegations are mutually denied.

MISS OLNEY ON THE WITNESS STAND.

After the opening by Mr. Ten Eyck reciting the facts he expected to prove, the calling of Miss Olney as the first witness created a manifest excitement in the court room, such an event being wholly unlooked for. She went upon the stand with most studied deliberation, and, having taken her seat, proceeded to fan herself with a nonchalance that was quite irresistible. In point of dress Miss Olney considerably surpassed Mrs. Newell. Underneath a long flowing dolman of black silk, lined with variegated fur, was revealed a skirt of black velvet. She wore a black hat of the latest pattern, trimmed with point lace and ostrich feathers. She wore no jewelry. Neatly fitting black kid gloves covered her delicate hands. She is quite petite in figure, has a complexion slightly inclined to the saffron, a slightly retroussé nose, cold dark gray eyes, and an expression not altogether prepossessing. She spoke at first in a very low tone of voice, scarcely rising above a whisper, which elicited in the outset frequent complaints from the opposing counsel, but afterward, although she came very near fainting in the early stage of her testimony and had to call for some water, when she became more self-assured and less disconcerted at the novelty of her position, spoke up very audibly. After giving her name and place of business, as stated above, she proceeded, in response to the questions put to her by Judge Fullerton, to give an outline of her acquaintance with Mr. Newell. She said she had carried on her present business in this city during the past ten years; a great portion of this time she occupied the middle room of the front floor where she carried on her business as a lodging room for herself; a portion of the time she had lived at the Spingler House and a part of the time she boarded in Twenty-seventh street; before coming to this city she lived in Providence, R. I., where she was born, and was in the employ of Messrs. Arnold & Tibbitts, wholesale milliner dealers.

FIRST ACQUAINTANCE WITH MR. NEWELL.

In response to further questions she stated that she first became acquainted with Mr. Newell some twenty or twenty-two years ago; she first met him in Providence; after the death of her mother she boarded a part of the time with Mrs. Fisher Ames; she probably saw Mr. Newell three or four times a year; Mr. Newell had a sister whom he desired that she should take into partnership with her and go to Boston; Mr. Newell's calls were sometimes business calls and sometimes social calls; she did not remember him ever calling on her more than one Sunday before he was married.

"Did you board at a hotel in Providence?"

"Never."

"Did you ever call on Mr. Newell at a hotel there?"

"Never."

"Did you go out with him while there?"

"What do you mean by going out?"

"Answer it as you understand it."

"I never went to a place of amusement with him there; I once went to lunch with him."

"Did you ever go out of Providence with him?"

"I went with him to a garden party in Cumberland given by Mr. William P. Currier; this was while his wife was in Paris; we rode in a phaeton; Mr. Newell said he was commissioned to take me."

"What is the secret of his being commissioned to take you?"

"There was no secret, no plan, no arrangement about it; we returned in the evening; I went to Boston with him last summer; I also spent a day at the Centennial with him."

HER VISIT TO NEW YORK.

"Before you came to New York on business how often did you use to visit the city?"

"I used to come two or three times a year; I stopped sometimes at Earle's Hotel and sometimes at Powers'."

"Did you see Mr. Newell at Earle's Hotel?"

"Quite likely; I don't remember distinctly."

"Do you recollect John, the waiter?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you tell John if Mr. Newell called you would meet him in the parlor?"

"I don't remember; Mr. Newell did call; I don't remember whether it was a social or business call; it is very likely that he called on me at Powers' Hotel."

Mr. Shafer objected to this line of inquiry, as relating to events ten years anterior to any allegations specified in the complaint.

Judge Lawrence said that it was very proper, as part of the history of the relations between these parties.

Judge Fullerton said that the opposing counsel need not be alarmed. He would reach the events mentioned in the complaint by easy stages.

A CONFUSED MEMORY.

"Did not Mr. Newell meet you at the boat upon your visit to New York upon one occasion and escort you to Earle's Hotel?"

Miss Olney cogitated a few moments and then said, "I do not remember."

"Do you think it possible, Miss Olney, that a married gentleman could meet you and conduct you to a hotel and you forget it?"

"I have no recollection of it."

"Will you say under oath to the jury that Mr. Newell did not meet and conduct you to Earle's Hotel?"

"I have no recollection of it."

Mr. Shafer thought the question fully answered in a variety of ways.

Mr. Fullerton put the question once more with the same result, and then said he would pass it by.

To other questions Miss Olney said that she never had her board paid by Mr. Newell. She sat by his side at the dinner table occasionally.

"How did it happen he sat beside you at the dinner table?"

"As any old acquaintance would."

Mr. Fullerton—"Oh, yes."

AT THE THEATRE.

Prior to 1868, when upon a visit here from Providence, she said she accompanied Mr. Newell to the theatre to hear Ristori. Occasionally within the last ten years she had attended the theatre with Mr. Newell, perhaps once or twice a year. She never passed as his cousin, never was known as his cousin and never claimed to be. She had stopped in the St. Denis Hotel in the spring of 1868; she saw Mr. Newell there also. While she was lodging at her place of business in Fourteenth street she at first had her meals sent in; at other times she dined at the St. Denis, and "at a little French place called Bigot's."

"Did Mr. Newell visit you there at your place of business and lodging?"

"He did."

"Did he ever take refreshments there with you?"

"He did. Mr. Newell during a period of six weeks took breakfast at the St. Denis."

AT THE ST. DENIS.

"He always paid for your meals?"

"Oh, no; I made it a condition before going that I should pay my own way."

"Did you pay James, the waiter?"

"Oh, no. I settled with Mr. Newell afterward."

"How often did you pay up your score?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you have wine with him there?"

"I never take wine."

"Did you ever have wine with Mr. Newell at the St. Denis?"

"I'm not in the habit of taking wine."

"No matter what your habit is now. Did you ever take wine with him there? Now answer, please. I have asked you four times now."

"I never drink wi——yes, I did have some champagne with him there once."

"Only once?"

"Only once that I remember."

"How often have you breakfasted with Mr. Newell?"

"Can't tell; it's impossible to tell the number of times."

"Why, because they were so numerous?"

"Oh, no; so seldom—or—numerous—as you please."

ATTENDING CHURCH.

"Have you attended church with Mr. Newell?"

"Yes."

"Whom had you been religiously inclined to hear when accompanied by Mr. Newell on Sundays?"

"Oh, Beecher, in Brooklyn."

"Who in New York?"

"Rev. Dr. Chapin and Mr. Hepworth."

EVENING VISITS.

In her further testimony she stated that Mr. Newell generally called to see her at her place of business about half-past eight o'clock in the evening, and sometimes remained until half-past eleven o'clock. She denied ever having visited him at his room.

"In his visits to your room where did you receive him?"

"In the front room."

"Did you ever take him into your lodging room?"

"It was not a lodging room; there was no bed in it, simply a sofa; there was a screen."

"A movable screen?"

"No; a stationary screen."

"Had he a night key to enter the place?"

"He had no key to my room."

"I am not asking you about your room."

"But I am telling you about my room."

"Have you dined with him lately?"

"About three or four weeks ago I took breakfast with him. When I visited the Centennial with him I came back the same day."

INNOCENT PLEASURE EXCURSION.

"Did you ever take any other excursion with him?"

"Some two or three years ago I went East to join a party of friends to go to the White Mountains. I met Mr. Newell on the boat."

"How did you happen to meet him? Did you meet him by any arrangement?"

"No, it was accidental. It was the first I knew of his going."

"Did he not say anything about meeting you on the boat?"

"I received a telegram on Saturday night from my friends when it was too late to go, and then I made up my mind to go on Sunday night."

"You saw Mr. Newell on Sunday morning? He knew you were going on the same boat? He didn't object, did he?"

Witness (embarrassed and after some hesitation)—"No, sir."

"Did you ever go with Mr. Newell to Providence on any other occasion?"

Rather snappishly, "Do you mean to make me say that in all the twenty years I have been going to Providence I never happened to go on the same boat with him?"

"I don't want you to say anything. Answer my question."

The witness finally said she did not remember ever having gone on the same boat to Providence with Mr. Newell, but would not swear that she never did. She gave the same reply with reference to having gone to Bristol with him. She admitted later on that she went in a night boat to Albany with Mr. Newell, and spent the day in Albany.

"What did you do all day in Albany?"

"Oh, it was only an excursion for pleasure."

"An excursion for pleasure?"

"An excursion for pleasure."

"Have you ever been on clambakes with Mr. Newell?" (Titter among the jury.)

"I was on one clambake with him."

"A clambake isn't clambakes."

"It was only one, and then several other ladies and gentlemen went with us."

EUROPEAN TOURS.

Four years ago she went to Europe on the Adriatic, of the White Star line, Mr. Newell being on the same steamer. She explained this strange chance meeting by the unexpected withdrawal of another steamer on which she had previously engaged her passage. She bought all her imported goods from Newell & Smith, and always imported through that house. It was for that reason that she had to be in Europe at the same time as Mr. Newell.

"What was the necessity for his being in Europe at the same time with you?"

"Ah! you evidently don't know the business." (Laughter.)

"Were you ever in Europe when he was not?"

"No, sir; I never was."

"Wouldn't a letter from him have done as well?"

"What? To buy, pack and ship goods? No, sir; it would not."

Recess for luncheon was now announced, and Miss Olney, who looked greatly flustered and seemed to be suffering from considerable nervous excitement, gathered up the skirts of her elegant silk dress and her fur lined cloak and stepped down. She chatted during lunch time with a lady friend and did not appear to be in want of any refreshment.

At half-past one Miss Olney was recalled. She fanned herself leisurely while waiting for ex-Judge Fullerton's interrogatory fire.

"Did you correspond with Mr. Newell when he was abroad and you were here?" asked Mr. Fullerton.

"Yes."

"How often."

"Usually once during his absence."

A BUNCH OF NEGATIVES.

"When you were boarding at Mrs. Ames' in Providence did not Mr. Newell come to take you out riding?"

"He never did."

"Did you ever go to the steamer to see Mr. Newell off when he went to Europe?"

"I did once."

"Do you know a Miss Hastings?"

"I know a Mrs. Hastings."

"Well, did you see this Mrs. Hastings after you had seen him off to the steamer?"

"Yes, I did."

"Did you weep before her?"

"Never!"

"Did you tell her that Mr. Newell had been engaged to you and yet had married a brunette?"

(Fiercely)—"Never! Mr. Newell's sister—"

"Never mind. I don't want to know anything about his sister."

"When he visited you in Providence did he ever discuss with you the subject of love?"

(Vehemently)—"Never!"

(Sternly)—"Did he ever put to you this particular question, 'Is love without marriage virtuous?'"

(Reddening)—"Never!"

"Would you have resented such a question?"

"Most assuredly I would."

LOVE CORRESPONDENCE.

"Did you ever correspond with him on the subject of love?"

"Never."

"Look at this letter and tell me whether it is in your handwriting?"

Ex-Judge Fullerton handed up to Miss Olney a small note in black borders which she took with unsteady fingers, and glanced over it in a dazed sort of way. "You are not to read the letter," said he, sternly, "you are only to tell whether it is your handwriting." The command had to be vigorously repeated by Judge Lawrence before she discontinued reading, and with a dramatic flourish she finally said, "It is my handwriting."

Ex-Judge Fullerton proposed to read the letter, which was dated Providence, September 17, 1867. Mr. Newell's counsel objected. Mr. Fullerton said he proposed to show that even at that early date this man was corrupting and demoralizing this woman by his teachings.

Judge Lawrence admitted the letter, which was then read. It was addressed to Mr. L. D. Newell, No. 262 Canal street, New York, and was as follows:—

A PHILOSOPHICAL LETTER.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 17, 1867.

MY DEAR FRIEND—The question you asked me last Saturday when applied personally is rather severe, or perhaps the peculiar circumstances under which it was asked gave to it a tone of severity. The purport of this question was, "Is marriage without love virtuous?" You very conclusively prove to me that marriage even with love is not happiness. There are many marriages of convenience that result in no more unhappiness than the most unselfish love—though, according to your theory, love is never unselfish. Your love, as I understand it, desires above everything else the happiness of the object beloved. Any sentiment less generous is not love of another, but simply the gratification of self-love. It may be through the agency of another. You frequently say that there are times when you feel that you know me very little, and when you told me a short time since that I had nothing to make my life sad, I thought how entirely unprepared you were to judge. You who do not or ever will know how many bitter drops have fallen into my cup of life. Do not think I am complaining. I enjoy many blessings for which I am truly thankful to the Giver of all Good. We are all more or less earnestly pursuing the phantom we call happiness; but how few are ever winners in the pursuit. We may overtake the phantom and it may tarry with us for a season; but 'tis folly for us to flatter ourselves that we have a permanent guest. It may be when we are at least prepared to bear the separation the phantom guest will elude our vigilance and depart, and when once upon the wing something more than human powers of persuasion will be required to recall it.

I have regretted many times that I spoke to you at all upon the subject, as nothing any one may say will influence me in my opinion. It is a matter that concerns no one so much as myself, and should there be any regrets after, I prefer that the whole responsibility shall rest upon myself and not with my friends, as what has been said can never be recalled. I have a request to make that I know you are too generous to refuse. You told me that your best beloved and favorite sister married for reasons similar to those I named. The request I wish to make is that you will apply to her the same question you put to me and then judge your friend as generously as I know you will judge your dear sister. I think I fully realized that no woman can bestow her hand when her heart is not interested, without doing violence to all the fine feelings of her nature.

"There is a wisdom of feeling as well as thought. Calculation is as often wrong as inspiration. The intuitions of our moral sentiments seldom mislead us." You probably recognize Mr. Beecher in the above quotation. I think it true that the mysterious power we possess is always our safest guide and truest friend. It is only in a worldly point of view that the sacrilege I spoke of can be contemplated with the slightest degree of satisfaction. In yours of August 28 you ask me to "prove my friend." An occasion has presented itself sooner than I anticipated to test the sincerity of your professions of your regard for your friend,

C.

The reading of the letter was listened to with interest, Miss Olney looking rather disdainfully at ex-Judge Fullerton during its perusal. He continued the examination as follows:—

"MISTAKEN."

"Then you were mistaken when you said he never asked you the question, 'Is marriage without love virtuous?'" (Laughter.)

(Smiling)—"I must have been."

"What occasion had you to discuss such a question?"

(Still smilingly pleasantly)—"I mentioned to him that a marriage for position with a wealthy gentleman had been proposed to me; it was at a garden party at Cumberland."

"What occasion had he to demonstrate to you even that marriage with love was not happiness?"

"He spoke of his own marriage, and showed me that, though he had married for love, he had not found happiness."

"Did Mr. Newell ever meet you in Europe when you went there alone?"

"Yes; he met me in Liverpool—unexpectedly."

"It was a great surprise to you to find him there, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir, it was." (Titter.) In Liverpool they stopped at the same hotel, and so they did in London, where they remained a week. There he accompanied her on business errands, but never on pleasure excursions. "Oh, yes," said she, "once we went to the theatre—only once." From London they went to Paris, where they put up at the Grand Hotel. Here it was again all business—no pleasure. Only once they went to the Cirque Napoleon. They came back in the same steamer.

"Did you ever occupy adjoining or communicating rooms at these hotels?"

With great energy, "Never!"

"In what year was this?"

"I don't remember."

"Wasn't it in the summer of 1873?"

"I suppose it was."

After straying far away to Europe Mr. Fullerton came back to the prosaic purlieus of New York and elicited the admission that she visited Central Park and Gilmore's Garden with him.

A HIT AT MRS. NEWELL.

"Upon any of those occasions did Mrs. Newell ever go with you and Mr. Newell?"

"I never knew her."

"You never made her acquaintance?"

"I declined to." (Titter.)

Ex-Judge Fullerton (sarcastically)—"Oh, oh!" (Laughter.)

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

This ended the examination, and Mr. Ira Shafer took up the cross-examination.

"Why did you decline to know Mrs. Newell?"

"Because her reputation was so bad; I would have no association with her; I knew her to be an unprincipled woman."

Miss Olney, questioned as to her antecedents, related that she was for twelve years a "trimmer" in a millinery house in Providence. Mr. Newell was then a salesman in a jobbing millinery house in New York, and when he came to the store to sell some goods by samples she generally saw him; he used to come to her house to pass a social evening, just as any other gentleman would.

"You were at a boarding house?"

(Earnestly) "Oh no, sir, only some friends. I was living with some friends."

"And at the other boarding house?"

(With equal earnestness) "That wasn't a boarding house, either—only some friends—I was living with some friends." Mr. Newell proposed to her to open a retail millinery store in Boston in conjunction with his sister. "I didn't accept that because I didn't fancy Boston as a city," she said; finally, in 1868, Newell and Smith furnished the capital to start her in business in this city in Fourteenth street; Mr. Smith withdrew after a year, and then in copartnership with Mr. Newell she carried on a very successful business until 1872, when she bought him out; as she had nobody to dine or breakfast with it was convenient for her to take her meals with Mr. Newell at the St. Denis restaurant; they divided the expense."

Mr. Shafer—You didn't think that was improper?

"No, sir."

Mr. Shafer (sotto voce)—I'd like to see anybody who saw anything improper in it, except my learned friend (pointing at Mr. Fullerton).

Mr. Fullerton (grimly)—We'll wait a little while yet.

Mr. Shafer—You'll have to wait a good while yet.

Miss Olney then testified that the trip to Albany was as innocent as possible; there was no impropriety in it whatever; they stopped at the best hotel.

Mr. Shafer (triumphantly)—That's disposed of.

Mr. Fullerton—Never mind; we'll make that little pleasure trip over again.

MALE GENTLEMAN.

Mr. Shafer—Did you think it improper to go to Europe with Mr. Newell, Mr. Warren, of Boston, and other male gentlemen. (Laughter.) A. No, sir.

Mr. Shafer (in a stentorian bass voice)—I use the term advisedly. There are gentlemen and male gentlemen. Mr. Newell always acted toward you as a male gentleman, did he not, Miss Olney? (Laughter.)

(With an earnest flourish of her fan) "He always acted toward me in the most gentlemanly manner."

"The object of the counsel in calling you is to prove that there was a criminal intimacy between you and Mr. Lorenzo D. Newell. Now, I ask you to tell the jury whether there ever was any such intimacy?"

(Solemnly) "Never."

THE USUAL SMALL BOY.

Truman R. Cornwall, a small, pale-visaged youth, testified that he was at one time an errand boy in Miss Olney's employ; he knew Mr. Newell and Miss Olney to go out of an evening; she went down in a carriage to see Mr. Newell off when he went to Europe, but he did not notice that she was crying when she came back.

John Bird, a waiter at the St. Denis Hotel, was asked how Mr. Newell and Miss Olney acted when they came together to their meals.

Witness—They acted like any other lady and gentleman. (Laughter).

Q. Did you take them for man and wife? A. No; I took them for a long time for brother and sister.

James Speir, a wheezy old man, another waiter at the St. Denis, also testified to seeing the couple at the restaurant. Judge Lawrence was anxious to hear more witnesses, but Mr. Fullerton declared that none were ready and an adjournment was taken until half-past ten this morning, His Honor notifying the counsel that the case should be closed by Friday.

THE "BUSINESS BROIL."

Mr. James M. Clark, of No. 11 Wall street, writes to the HERALD, asserting emphatically that the item headed "A Business Broil," published in the HERALD of the 9th inst., is a misstatement of the facts in the case. He says he never owed Mr. Felton $500, and denies that he was arrested on a civil complaint, contending that the deputy sheriff simply served him with "an execution against the person" for the costs in a suit he had against Mr. Felton and in which he got a verdict. This verdict being for less than $50 he (Mr. Clark) was naturally charged with the costs. He denies that he threatened Mr. Felton's life, and points to his "prompt dismissal" by the Judge on his own recognizance "not to molest" Mr. Felton "for six months" as proof that Mr. Felton's charge that he did threaten his life was frivolous.

THE SIXTY-NINTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

It is with much regret that I have observed the efforts that have been made to give public notoriety to the affairs of the regiment which I have the honor to command, because I am convinced that public discussion upon the subject of regimental difference always tends to the discredit and injury of the regiment. Nor do I now desire in any way to participate in it excepting simply to say that the statements appearing in what purported to be interviews with Major Duffy and others concerning my administration of the affairs of the regiment are absolutely untrue.

It may also be important for the public to know that in point of discipline and numerical strength the Sixty-ninth regiment has been steadily progressing, and is now in a much better condition than it ever was before or since I was called to its command.

JAMES CAVANAGH, Colonel.

M'CARTHY, OF COMPANY G.

Captain Reilly, of G company, Sixty-ninth regiment, made a complaint before Judge Smith yesterday against John McCarthy, of No. 1,572 Third avenue, formerly one of his command. The charge was that McCarthy, who had been tried by court martial for neglect of duty and found guilty, had afterward refused to give up his uniform when Captain Reilly sent for it. The uniform, the Captain claims, belongs to the regiment, as it originally cost $48 50, $38 of which money was paid out of the State and regimental fund. Under the Military Code the Captain claimed that McCarthy was liable to be punished for misdemeanor. Judge Smith held McCarthy in $200 bail, and paroled him till to-day to procure it. He said he did not wish to pass upon the matter, but would rather it would go before another court.

BERGH'S SUBSTITUTE.

A DISBELIEVER IN HYDROPHOBIA CONSENTS TO BE INOCULATED WITH THE VIRUS OF A MAD DOG—WHAT HE HAS TO SAY ON THE SUBJECT.

The proposition to test Mr. Bergh's disbelief in hydrophobia by a practical experiment upon that eminent friend of the lower animals not having met with acceptance on the part of the President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the public will be prepared to listen to the offers of people who are willing to take his place and submit to inoculation in his stead. Already the HERALD is in receipt of the following letter:—

THE CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

BROOKLYN, April 8, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Seeing in your paper the proposition made to Mr. Bergh to inoculate him with saliva from a rabid dog, all for the cause of science, I would say that I am in the same belief with Mr. Bergh. If this physician will give me $2,000 in gold I will afford him the opportunity of putting his theory into practice, the money to be mine as soon as the operation has been performed, which must be done in the presence of responsible parties.

DOGBERRY.

Accompanying this letter were the name and address of the writer, and a reporter of the HERALD was at once sent to ascertain if the offer came from a responsible source and was made in good faith. In both these respects the answer was in every way satisfactory. Ringing the bell of a cosey little house in South Brooklyn the reporter was met by a comely young girl, who showed him into a plain but comfortable parlor, and in response to his inquiries went in search of her father. In no respect were there any evidences that the house was a private lunatic asylum, and the master of the domicile when he appeared turned out to be a shrewd, intelligent and hard-headed Scotchman.

"I am sent by the HERALD," said the reporter, "to ascertain whether you wrote the letter signed 'Dogberry,' and whether your proposition is made in good faith."

"I wrote it, and if the doctor wants to try the experiment on me I am ready to submit to it in consideration of the sum I named."

"But don't you think $2,000 a small sum for the risk you will run?" asked the reporter.

"No; it's enough, I think, for I do not believe I run any risk."

"But if the inoculation kills you, what then?"

"Then the money would go to my family. You see I don't believe there is any such thing as hydrophobia, and I am sure I ran a much greater risk when I went into the army. Whenever the doctor puts up the money I am willing to try the experiment."

"How came you to make such a proposition?"

"I MEAN BUSINESS."

"Well, you see I was reading the doctor's challenge to Bergh, and I thought the physician was making fun of the animals' friend. I believe in Bergh, and as I told you before I don't believe in hydrophobia, and as nobody could expect so good and useful a man as he is to submit to such an experiment I concluded to offer to do it myself. I don't want my name printed unless my proposition is accepted, but the HERALD knows where to find me and that I mean business."

"What is your motive in making this offer?"

"I want to make the money, of course, but then I am anxious also to do something for the cause of science."

"But if the experiment kills you?"

"The cause of science will be served all the same. But it won't kill me. People who were bitten by dogs have died in great agony no doubt, but it was their fears and not the bite which caused their death. I'm not going to let my imagination kill me, I can tell you, and my only fear is that the doctor will back out."

"You don't think the offer made in good faith, then?"

"I think it was made to tease Bergh, but as I ain't as useful a man as Bergh is and need the money more I have concluded to try the experiment if the doctor means business."

"What does your family say to this proposition of yours?"

"I havn't told them yet."

THE SUBSTITUTE'S HOME.

This remarkable conversation, at once so frank and straightforward, induced the reporter to lead the talk into other channels, to see if his interlocutor was equally practical and hard-headed on all subjects, and it must be confessed if the man is a lunatic nobody short of a lunatic can discover it. He is coherent and logical in everything. "I am an engineer," he said, "but just now I'm out of a job. I was getting $2 50 a day, but another man came along and offered to take my place for $12 a week, and so they let me go." Apparently he feels no uneasiness in regard to another job, and his home is certainly as cosey and comfortable as the home of any intelligent mechanic in the City of Churches. The walls of his parlor are adorned with prints and chromos, and in one corner is a piano with music and music books scattered over it. He has to himself "a whole house" and is proud of the comfort and taste with which he is surrounded. Altogether it is too good a home to be forsaken lightly, and if the man is as earnest as he seems—for a profound seriousness pervades all that he says on the subject of rabies—he must be a strong disbeliever in the theory of hydrophobia. When the reporter rose to go he put on his hat and accompanied him to a car, talking on a variety of subjects on the way, but frequently recurring to the proposition which was the occasion of the reporter's visit, and when the latter was leaving he said by way of good by, "Tell the doctor whenever he is ready with the money I will be on hand for the experiment, and you and I will break a bottle of wine over it afterward."

WOE TO THE SPITZ.

An ordinance proposed at the last regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners at Long Branch providing for the killing of all Spitz dogs found in that place caused considerable dissatisfaction among the Spitz owners. They claim that the ordinance should cover all dogs or none. The owners of sporting dogs apprehend that an effort will be made to include their dogs. Citizens who do not own dogs greatly favor the proposed ordinance, and are anxious to be authorized to begin the work of extermination immediately. The dogs on the streets and avenues are so numerous that pedestrians are repeatedly attacked by them.

A MYSTERY UNVEILED.

It was a big case, strongly fastened, and consigned to Messrs. Mullen & Son, of Broadway. The carman who brought it came late, and, as the establishment of the Messrs. Mullen was closed, their neighbor, Mr. Montgomery instructed some of his men to take it up stairs and keep it safe there till morning. He little knew that this courteous turn would be the prolific source of much consternation in his establishment that night and in fact in all that neighborhood. But so it proved. The hours wore on and a clerk was ensconced on the big box talking politics to the watchman and janitor, when he was startled by a sudden buzzing noise just underneath him. That wielder of the pen jumped fully a yard in the air and when he had come down he gazed upon the case with an alarmed and abstracted air. The noise was coming from it—a curious sound whirring and clattering like the unwinding of machine gear. A dreadful suspicion flashed upon the onlooker. Thomassen, the dynamite fiend, had used just such a contrivance to compass his wicked ends. Might not some conspirator have introduced this infernal machine with the benign intention of blowing No. 302 Broadway and its animated contents into atoms? The thought was dreadful, so the clerk communicated it to his companions and took to his heels. Only a moment did the watchman tarry, only a moment to see if the janitor had escaped breaking his neck in his leap down the stairway, and then he, too, plunged into the night and made his best time to the Fourth precinct police station, where he found the clerk detailing his dreadful discovery. Properly reinforced, the party returned to the building, every moment expecting to see the red shadow of the explosion thrown across their way. Once there, an intrepid officer, baton in hand, mounted the stairway till he heard, loud and clear, issuing from the mysterious case a sound like a burglar's alarm. This was too much for his nerves, and he broke for the door with an idea that the house was tumbling down upon him. There was another interval, and then, as no destroying element was heard from, a simultaneous ascent was made by the party and the case was taken by storm. Slowly and cautiously it was pried open. None too soon, however, as the whirring noise was beginning again, and another retreat was meditated. Then, as the dark lanterns flashed into it, the mystery was unveiled. The case was filled with clocks.

FIFTH AVENUE PAVEMENT.

COMMISSIONER CAMPBELL PREVENTED FROM CARRYING ON THE WORK BY THE ALDERMEN.

A serious hitch has taken place in the proposed immediate pavement of Fifth avenue from Fifty-ninth to Seventy second street with MacAdam pavement, under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Works. An advertisement has appeared in the City Record for some time past calling for proposals for doing this work. These proposals were to be opened at twelve o'clock yesterday. At Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Aldermen, as already published, a resolution was hurried through directing Commissioner Campbell to postpone the awarding of a contract for the work until after final action is had upon Senator Hogan's bill. This measure proposes the appointment of a commission to pave the avenue from Waverley place to Ninetieth street and take the control of the matter out of the hands of Commissioner Campbell. Under the present law it appears that no contract can be given out by the Department of Public Works for any patent pavement. The bill introduced by Senator Hogan, it is claimed, if it becomes a law, will operate in the interest of certain parties who propose to lay a patent pavement on Fifth avenue. The Aldermanic resolution was passed in order to prevent the award of the contract by Mr. Campbell. That gentleman was yesterday served with a copy of the resolution immediately after it had received the signature of Mayor Ely. Mr. Campbell, having noticed the passage of the resolution in the proceedings of the Aldermen, concluded to postpone the opening of bids until the 10th inst. He has also consulted with Corporation Counsel Whitney as to the proper course to be pursued under the circumstances. A legal opinion will probably be given before the bids are formally opened or returned to the contractors. It is a question as to whether the action of the Board binds the Commissioner of Public Works in further dealing with the subject. The resolution was passed by a majority, not a three-fourths vote, of the Aldermen, and this fact may also tend to invalidate the action of that body. The following is the vote on the passage of this resolution:—Yeas—Messrs. Roberts, Bennett, Carroll, Ehrhart, Foster, Guntzer, Hall, Keenan, Lewis, Phillips, Sauer, Slevin and Waehner. Nays—Messrs. Biglow, Gedney, Kiernan, Morris, Perley and Pinckney.

A NEW BARGE OFFICE.

CONGRESSMAN MULLER'S VIEWS ON AN OLD TIME PROJECT.

Mr. Nicholas Muller, Representative in Congress from the Fifth district of this city, came here last Friday to see his friends and constituents, and departed last evening to attend to his duties in Washington. Mr. Muller has introduced during his term a resolution for the establishment of a new barge office on the line of the Battery, which would facilitate the landing of first class passengers from ocean bound steamers entering this port. A new barge office was contemplated many years ago. In 1866 the Legislature of the State gave permission to the city of New York to convey to the United States a portion of the lands under water within the limits of what is known as the "Battery Extension" for the purpose of a barge office and a slip or basin for revenue and other government vessels, and the jurisdiction over the lands and premises to be acquired was ceded to the United States government and the lands and premises forever exempted from taxation. In 1867 the city of New York granted to the United States for $10,000—a nominal consideration—about three and a half acres of land under water at the easterly end of the Battery grounds. Subsequently from time to time Congress appropriated in all $225,000 for a sea wall and barge office, which sum was expended on building the wall resting on a rock foundation and the exterior wall of the barge office side. The city has completed the Battery grounds up to the lands of the United States, and has completed the carriage way, seventy-five feet wide, from Whitehall street, in front of the government property, and this right of way is presented to the United States perpetually, in addition to the three and a half acres of real estate already granted. The examination of baggage is now made by inspectors of the customs under supervision of the Surveyor of the Port. Whenever a steamer arrives and passes Quarantine as many inspectors as can be spared are collected at the barge office, and, with the Deputy Surveyor in charge, proceed in a revenue steamer to the dock of the steamship company where the passengers are to be landed. As it is not possible to examine baggage on the deck of a steamship the passengers and their baggage are landed upon the pier of the steamship company, crowded as it usually is with merchandise and vehicles and exposed to the inclemency of the weather, and under such circumstances the cabin passengers by the first class steamers coming to this port endure great and unnecessary hardship.

RELIEF DESIRED.

For this duty an appraiser, a clerk from the Collector's office and a clerk from the Naval Office are present during the examination of baggage. This sub-custom house is established for the time at the most convenient place on the dock, usually in an office of the steamship company. These companies are desirous of being relieved of the inconvenience attending the use of their docks for this purpose, and have signified their willingness, as soon as the government provides a proper place to anchor their vessels in the stream, to convey passengers and their baggage from the ship to such place as the government may designate.

Mr. Muller was asked by a HERALD reporter if he thought this new barge office which he had in contemplation was really needed, and he replied:—

"I consider it is greatly needed, and I think New York city loses a good deal by passengers landing in Jersey City and Hoboken because we lack the quick accommodation for them that this barge office would supply. It would save many hours of time for cabin passengers from Europe, who are now compelled to land on the piers, trusting to luck for Custom House officers to be present and for cab service to take them to their hotels or to their homes. This barge office business was suggested to me by finding, when I went to Washington last October, that $225,000 was appropriated for the purpose as far back as 1866, and I introduced a resolution requesting that that money might be diverted to its original and proper object. I don't think that the cost of building this barge office will exceed $80,000, and it will be a great benefit to this city, as any man can see who will take the trouble to calculate what it costs the United States government to run its present barge office and its adjuncts. It costs in rent nearly $6,000 a year for the present barge office, and for the rent of the various offices along the piers probably twice as much, so that the proposition I make to erect a United States building on the projection at the Battery next to the Governor's Island ferry, which would have no interference with any present or possible line of ferry boats, must commend itself to the common judgment."

Mr. Muller is sanguine that it will be favorably reported by the Committee on Public Works and Grounds, to which it was referred, and he has no doubt that it will be immediately passed by the House.

BARBARA, THE BEGGAR.

AN UNEXPECTED DISCOVERY OF WEALTH—WHAT A BEGGAR'S CLOTHING REVEALED AT THE MORGUE.

Barbara Allen, the old "beggar woman," who was seized with a fit at the Fulton ferry house, on the Brooklyn side, on Tuesday evening, and who died on her way to the hospital, it is now discovered was a person of wealth. Coroner Simms held an inquest yesterday, and a statement was made before him by Mr. Maguire, the keeper of the Morgue, to the following effect:—He said that he had made a careful examination of the clothing of the deceased. In the pocket of an inside dress there was found $15 07 in money, and a bank book showing that there was $1,095 88 to her credit in the Brooklyn Savings Bank, the last deposit being on January 1, 1878. On making this discovery a further search was instituted through the clothing, every stitch of which was examined, and in the bosom pads were found two slips of paper, giving the numbers of the bank books and the banks in which she is supposed to have deposits. The latter were as follows:—Seaman's Savings Bank, New York; Bleecker Street Savings Bank, New York; Brooklyn Savings Bank, Broadway Savings Bank and the Bowery Savings Bank.

The Coroner said that it had not yet been ascertained what was the amount standing to the credit of Mrs Allen at these banks, but if all the banks have a deposit equal to that at the Brooklyn Bank there is a fortune of about $20,000 for the heirs of the deceased.

Little is known of the personal history or habits of the deceased. She was seventy-five years of age, and was comfortably clothed. A basket which she had with her when she was picked up in the ferry house was found to contain a quantity of broken victuals which she had apparently begged at various places in the city. It was ascertained by the police that the deceased had resided at No. 149 Madison street, in this city, and that she had lived by begging from door to door. The woman at this house, from whom she hired the room, says the deceased had told her that she was born in England, that she had no relatives in this country or any friends in England that would care for her. It was surmised from the few scraps of conversation she had had with the inmates of the house that she had been divorced from her husband about eighteen years ago. He is supposed to have been a captain on one of the English steamers.

Dr. McPharlane in his post-mortem examination of the remains yesterday discovered that death was occasioned by congestion of the lungs. A verdict was rendered accordingly. The body was given to the care of County Undertaker Foran and will be respectably interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

THE BOOK TRADE SALE.

A large lot of Webster's Dictionaries were sold at the book trade sale yesterday by G. & C. Merriam, but not so large a lot as that of two years ago. Forty-eight of the unabridged were sold, 30 of the National Pictorial Dictionary and 1,200 of the smaller dictionaries. The World Publishing House sold ten sets each of Burns, Byron, Cowper, Milton, Pope, Shakespeare and Scott and ten sets each of popular novels and histories. Harper & Bros. offered a much larger lot of books than most of the publishers, but not a large lot compared with last year. The Jacob Abbott stories opened their list, and of these they sold ten sets of ten volumes each; five sets of William Black's novels; ten sets of Charlotte Bronté's novels, in ten volumes, duplicating on Shirley and Jane Eyre; 400 of Will Carlton's poems; 10 sets of George Eliot's novels; 190 of J. R. Green's Histories; 243 copies of Mrs. Henderson's Cook Book; 25 Tom Brown; 30 of Charles Nordhoff's books; 12 sets Charles Reade's novels; 550 of Swinton's Language Books; 70 Tennyson's complete works; 1,500 of Wilson's Readers, and 25 sets of the Half Hour series closed their invoice. T. B. Peterson & Bro., who appeared in the sale for the first time in five years, sold 10 sets of Mrs. Southworth's novels in 43 volumes; 10 sets of Mrs. Ann S. Stephens' novels and many more novels. Mr. W. W. Harding, long famous for his Bibles and albums, has sold out his business in this line, and yesterday offered his balance of stock to the trade, selling 426 Bibles, many of them very high priced, and 3,219 photograph albums. The heaviest duplicating since the opening of the sale was of Harpers' books.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The Managing Committee of the Stock Exchange decided yesterday to adjourn over Good Friday. They also came to an agreement about the punishment to be meted out to the two pugilistic brokers who made an exhibition of themselves three weeks ago on the floor of the Exchange. It will be remembered that the quarrel arose from a disagreement in relation to some stock which both brokers claimed. There was only one round and one blow struck, the members of the Exchange preventing further hostility. The sentence of Harry S. Camblos, who struck the blow, is suspension for twenty days, and T. L. Manson, Jr., receives five days' punishment. This decision will be announced to the members to-day by the President from the rostrum. The managers have decided to hear the report of the committee, appointed some time ago, to inquire into the feasibility of using the Clearing House, commencing on governments and expanding until it includes stocks, bonds, and everything connected with the Exchange. The subject will be discussed on Wednesday.

THE CAMDEN MURDER.

Hunter Plots the Death of Graham, His Alleged Accomplice.

A FIENDISH PROPOSITION.

"You Put Strychnine in His Coffee and I'll Give You Two Hundred Dollars!"

AN ATTENDANT'S STORY

PHILADELPHIA, April 10, 1878.

Benjamin Hunter, the alleged murderer of John M. Armstrong, is still confined in the murderer's cage in the Camden Jail. He is watched day and night, Keepers Hollis and Ware taking turns in guarding the room of which the iron cage is the centre. Hunter betrays no signs of realizing the terrible position in which he stands since the confession of young Graham, his confederate, who made a clean breast and told the whole horrible story of how he and Hunter committed the murder. He spends a great deal of his time in singing and whistling, "Home, Sweet Home" and "Hold the Fort" being his favorite selections. He eats voraciously, sleeps well, assumes a good humored behavior and acts generally like a man whose conscience is entirely at peace. But for his sinister face a visitor would not suspect him of being the man against whom there is apparently overwhelming evidence of having assassinated his best friend to obtain his life insurance money. He has never betrayed fear or despondency, except upon the one occasion, the first day of his confinement in the cage, when the Sheriff mentioned to him the name of Mrs. Spelissy, of whom he purchased the hat to disguise himself for the murder. When he realized that the authorities had discovered this he grew pale and his knees knocked together. But he speedily recovered himself and has shown no signs of weakness since then. He is undoubtedly a man of extraordinary nerve, or he would never bear up and smile under a load which would have crushed most men long ago.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP.

But beneath his nonchalant exterior he has been busily plotting further mischief, nothing less than another murder, if the evidence of another inmate of the jail is to be believed. It seems that a young man named Thomas Ellis was, until yesterday, when his short term of confinement expired, a fellow prisoner with Hunter, and being in for a mild case of assault and battery, was allowed to make himself useful in the jail by carrying the meals to the prisoners kept in closer confinement than himself, and other work giving him the freedom of the institution. To this man Hunter actually proposed that he should murder Graham, the accomplice who confessed, by putting strychnine in his coffee, offering him $200 if he would commit the crime. Ellis, horror stricken, promptly informed the prison officials. The details of the manner in which this infamous proposition was made and the circumstances that followed are best told in the following affidavit, signed and sworn to by Ellis this afternoon before a master in chancery and in presence of the Public Prosecutor and the Sheriff:—

A DEVILISH PLOT.

I was sentenced for sixty days for assault and battery, and have done some work about the jail for the keeper. I have been taking up the meals to Hunter. One day he said to me, "Do you give this other man (Graham) the same to eat as I get?" I said I didn't know, but I asked the cook about it and he said "Yes." I also told the keeper, Mr. Kennedy. On Tuesday, April 2, 1878, he managed to whisper, "Does Graham get the same victuals as I do?" I said "Yes."

"Well," Hunter replied, "you can make $200 out of me. You put strychnine in his coffee, and as soon as you've done it I'll give you the money." He added, "he thought he was smart, blowing on me, but he wasn't so smart as he thought he was." The keeper, Ware, was sweeping and moving about at the time I came down and told Kennedy and the Sheriff. The Sheriff told me to say to Hunter that I'd do it. That same evening I went up, and while Ware was moving out some things in the room Hunter said, "Will you do it if I show you the money?" I told him I would, and he said, "Don't make a botch of it when you do it. Put enough in his coffee or his tea. I'll show you the money in the morning, or as soon as I can get my lawyer to get it for me." I went up the next morning and at dinner to take his meals to Hunter. He said that he had not had a chance to get the money. On last Friday I went up, and Hollis, the keeper, went away for some cigars. Hunter was sitting there, and he did not say anything until I spoke to him. I said, "How about this thing? You have a chance and can work it up now." He said, "Shut up; somebody will hear you." I went to the door to satisfy him and said that no one was coming, and I said, "Shall I do it in the morning?" "Oh, I was only joking," Hunter replied. I said that that was not so, and after my looking to see if there was anybody coming he said:—"Graham acted dirty with me, and I never went back on a man in my life. You do the job and I'll give you the money. After Graham is dead you tell Scovel, my lawyer, to come right up to me." On Saturday morning I told him I was waiting my chance to do it, and he said that he had told Scovel to get him the $200 (two one hundred dollar notes). He also intimated that Scovel knew what the money was for.

This story, so far as it relates to the Sheriff and the officials of the jail, is entirely confirmed, and it is believed that Ellis tells the whole truth.

CORROBORATIVE EVIDENCE.

Turnkey Kennedy repeats the narrative of Ellis almost as he gives it. Speaking of the watchman, Ware, who has charge of Hunter, he remarked that it frequently happens during the day that Ware rings his bell for some one to relieve him for a little while, in order to enable him to breathe the fresh air, as his position in the room constantly with Hunter is monotonous, and in order to give him the needed relaxation the head keeper often sent Ellis up. Mr. Kennedy continued:—"On Tuesday morning of last week, after Ellis had been up to the cage, he came down white as a sheet. When I asked him what was the matter he said, 'That scoundrel, Hunter, offered me $200 to put Graham away.' Then he related the story of Hunter's proposition to procure strychnine and drop it into Graham's coffee. Without telling Ware anything about the affair I managed it so that Ellis would be there quite often, and urged him to get the money from Hunter. One day he asked Hunter for the money, when he pulled out a roll of paper and said 'There it is,' but he afterward said the money would be here on Tuesday, that's yesterday. Hunter knew that Ellis had the privilege of going out frequently, and told him to buy the strychnine at a drug store. Hunter would have given Ellis the money if we had waited a day or two longer."

HOW HUNTER TALKS.

The correspondent went up stairs to see Hunter and found him in his usual pleasant mood, glad to see his visitor, with whom he shook hands through the bars, and was very anxious to have it understood that he was quite comfortable. "Never felt better in my life, I assure you," said he, "I eat well, sleep well and I am comfortable, mentally and physically. You see, I have nice quarters here," pointing with a smile meant to be pleasant, to the gloomy iron bars forming the four sides of the cage in which he sat. "Oh, they take good care of me here; good victuals and everything of the best, and Jimmy, he keeps the place very clean and nice, don't you, Jimmy?"

Jimmy Ware, the day keeper, was even at that time engaged in cleaning the floor of the room outside the cage.

"You speak as though you liked your present quarters better than where I saw you downstairs," said the correspondent.

"Oh, yes," rejoined Hunter, "there's more fresh air and ventilation. I used to have the headache down there; now I feel first rate. They treat me first rate, too. They let me outside there where you are sometimes. That's where I sit when the barber comes to shave me. Oh, yes, they'll let me go all over the house by and bye. The judge there (Ware, the keeper) is going to change places with me and let me play turnkey for a while, won't you, Judge?" said Hunter, with a laugh.

There was an evident desire on his part to impress the visitor that he was quite comfortable in his confinement, and Hunter repeated this observation several times. He does not read his Bible any more, because they have taken away his eyeglasses, and he cannot read the fine print of daily papers. He is visited occasionally by his lawyers and by his wife and family very often, he told his visitor, but this is not true, his jailors say, his wife calling upon him infrequently.

He has not been told of the discovery of his plot to have Graham poisoned, and the correspondent ventured to hint at the matter during the interview. Hunter was talking volubly and pleasantly about the rain being so good for the crops and how cool it would be in the cage in the summer time, when the visitor suddenly asked, "How's Graham?" Hunter's whole manner changed. He at once averted his eyes, but not rapidly enough to conceal an unusual glare in them. "I don't know anything about him," he replied gruffly, with his head turned aside.

"I hear," said the correspondent, carelessly, "that he is suddenly taken very sick." Hunter gave a quick, sharp glance at his visitor, and demanded, eagerly, "Is he? who says so? where did you hear it?" Just here there was a provoking interruption in the shape of three morbid sightseers, who, provided with official passes, had come to see a live murderer. Hunter greeted them with his customary politeness, and the correspondent did not get a favorable opportunity to refer to Graham again.

SPECIE PAYMENTS.

Secretary Sherman was again closeted with a number of prominent bankers in the office of General Hillhouse at the Sub-Treasury yesterday. The doors, however, were effectually closed to representatives of the press, as were also the lips of those present at the conference; so that whatever progress may have been made by the Secretary toward facilitating the early resumption of specie payments remains for the present a secret. A rumor was circulated on the street in the afternoon that the bankers had agreed to take a certain quantity of the new four per cent bonds, provided the Secretary would allow them to retain the gold here in the banks and furnish other bonds to the Treasury in its stead. Whether this proposition, if made, was regarded by the Secretary favorably or otherwise the quid nuncs of the pavement were unable to state.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1878.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—To insure the proper classification of advertisements it is absolutely necessary that they be handed in before eight o'clock every evening.

The probabilities are that the weather in New York and its vicinity to-day will be warm and cloudy, with rain, followed by temporary clearing and stronger southerly to southwesterly winds. To-morrow it will be warm and partly cloudy.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—The stock market was less active, and stocks at the close were weak. Gold opened at 100¾ and closed at 100⅝. Government bonds were weak, States dull and railroads irregular. Money on call was active at 6 a 7 per cent, the latter being the ruling rate.

A REIMPOSITION of the odious income tax has been unwisely agreed upon by the Ways and Means Committee.

WILLIAM M. TWEED is reported to be seriously ill at Ludlow Street Jail. He is confined to his bed, and his physician seems to be alarmed.

THE TREASURER of the Union Mill corporation, Fall River, Mass., has wound up that corporation by the very effective process of a half million dollar defalcation.

A SET OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS is the latest proposed addition to the government machine at Washington. This valuable suggestion is made by our Board of Transportation.

MEXICO, according to despatches from Washington, levies her forced war loans with beautiful impartiality. Americans, Frenchmen, Germans, in fact every one who has a dollar is compelled to contribute.

SOMETHING ought to be done to conciliate ex-Governor Wise, of Virginia. In a suit in one of the city courts yesterday an affidavit made by him was read, in which he describes himself as an "unregenerated and unrepentant rebel."

CONGRESS yesterday did little of importance. In the Senate an effort to obtain the consideration of the bill in regard to General Shields was defeated, and the bill to repeal the Bankrupt act was debated. The House discussed the Pension Appropriation bill.

THE NEW EXCISE COMMISSIONERS have illustrated their peculiar fitness for their positions by informing the unlicensed liquor dealers that if they do not comply with the law by a given date they will be prosecuted. This is what they call reform.

THE ERECTION of a barge office at this port, in regard to which a bill has been introduced in Congress by Mr. Muller, would be an advantage to the government and a very great convenience to the thousands of passengers who annually arrive here from Europe.

MOB VIOLENCE AT ELECTIONS has, as a rule, become a thing of the past, but Harrison, N. J., furnishes an exception. This week in that town the rowdy element got the upper hand, smashed the ballot boxes and destroyed the election records. A little Jersey justice is needed around there.

THE SENSATION in the courts yesterday was the trial of the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Newell against her husband. The public is already painfully familiar with the domestic infelicities of Mr. Newell and his wife, but the proceedings just instituted promise to throw more light upon the story of their unhappy relations. One of the novel features of the case yesterday was the examination of the alleged particeps criminis as a witness.

THE WEATHER.—The storm centre has now moved into Minnesota, with a northward and eastward tendency of progress. The high pressure on the Middle and East Atlantic coasts is slowly moving eastward and southward. Although the storm preserves its organization with remarkable vigor the precipitation in the immediate vicinity of its centre has decreased. Indeed, the rainfall is now confined to the Middle and Eastern States and along the whole length of the Atlantic coast line. A light fall has taken place in Minnesota and Nebraska, but only locally. The winds attending the centre of lowest barometer are very high and affect all the region between the lakes and Upper Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains within the same degrees of latitude. As the high pressure recedes to the southeastward the storm will probably pass into the lake region and over Canada toward New Brunswick. The temperatures have varied but little since Tuesday, but will probably rise on this coast. The weather in New York and its vicinity to-day will be warm and cloudy, with rain, followed by temporary clearing and stronger southerly to southwesterly winds. To-morrow it will be warm and partly cloudy.

The Condition of Parties.

The republicans held last evening a Congressional caucus to consider the condition of their party and to plan for its future, and especially for the fall elections, in which not only a new House is to be chosen but legislatures in several States, which are in their turn to elect Senators. The HERALD has so long been a true friend of the republican party, and has so often and so faithfully admonished the party leaders to abandon shortsighted and merely selfish policies and place themselves upon broad and statesmanlike ground, that we cannot help taking a lively interest in the caucus. The meeting was harmonious and free from excitement, although a violent attack upon the President's policy had been predicted. It was not at all probable that a caucus called for the purpose of appointing a Congressional campaign committee would have rushed needlessly into a wrangle about the administration's policy, but it is a significant indication of the condition of the party that the absence of such an assault is regarded as a "triumph" for the President. Senator Sargent proposed a resolution condemning the famous "civil service order," by which "nearly ninety thousand republican officials throughout the land" were directed to abstain from participation in political movements, and asking that it be rescinded; but the "order" was practically annulled with the consent of the President in the last election and there was scarcely a necessity for such a resolution. On the motion of Senator Edmunds it was referred to a committee of eleven, with power to confer with the President on the subject. The caucus held a short session, and neither Senator Conkling nor Senator Blaine was present.

The republican leaders, when they had their doors bolted and their guards set outside, ought to have begun by taking an account of stock. This is not a very pleasant operation for them, for they will discover that they have been, so to speak, carrying on business at a steady loss for a good many years. In 1866 they had in the Senate 27 majority; in 1869, the year in which General Grant became President, this had increased to 42; in 1871, in a full Senate, they had 50 majority; in 1873 they had but 30; in 1876 it had fallen to 10, and at present they have but 2 majority, counting Judge Davis as a democrat, but including Senator Sharon, who is permanently absent. In the House they have been running down hill in the same way, only more rapidly. In 1866 they had 105 majority in the House; in 1868 it had risen to 126, in 1869 it fell to 86, in 1870 they had but 67, in 1871 the republican majority was only 30, in 1873 it fell to 17, in 1876 the tables were turned and the democrats came in on what was called the "groundswell" and had 70 majority, and in the present House they have 15.

To sum up the situation, the republicans had when General Grant came in, in 1869, a majority of 42 in the Senate and of 86 in the House. To-day they have a majority of 2 in the Senate, and are sure to be in the minority next year, while in the House they are in a minority already. As to the future—the terms of twenty-five Senators expire in March, 1879, of whom 17 are republicans and 8 democrats. Only five of their successors have so far been elected, and of these five Messrs. Sargent and Matthews are succeeded by democrats; Mr. Allison succeeds himself, and two democrats have democratic successors. Of the six democratic Senators whose successors are still to be chosen only two are in doubt. Of the fourteen republican Senators whose successors are to be elected six are certain to be succeeded by democrats, and several others are in doubt. Leaving doubtful cases to stand as they are it is clear that the Senate on the 4th of next March must have a democratic majority of at least 10. The republicans have therefore lost the Senate; that they can no longer hope to save, and the question is, of course, whether they can recover control of the House.

What are their hopes of the next House? We have taken the trouble to look over the majorities of the members of the present House. Many persons will remember that an uncommonly large number of districts were carried in 1876 by narrow majorities, and we have made a list of all the members who hold their seats by majorities less than a thousand; of these there are 34 republicans and 19 democrats. If we count only those who came in by less than 500 majority we find 16 democrats and 19 republicans.

When a general has lost campaign after campaign working on a fixed line of operations, if he is wise it will occur to him by and by that perhaps it is not the fault of the troops, nor of his subordinate commanders; but that he himself has blundered in taking and maintaining a wrong line of operations. Our republican friends have, however, not got that far yet, if the reports from Washington may be relied on. They mean to "fight it out on the old line;" they are getting the "bloody shirt" ready to raise once more as their banner; they must, they think, give the Southern question one more trial. This is certainly spirited conduct, considering the figures which we have collected above; but it is hardly wise. They have fought on that line under far more favorable circumstances in the past ten years than they can ever hope to again, and they have lost both houses in these prolonged campaigns. Had they not better change? The President is reported to have said that when he came into the White House he found his party moribund, and that he had been trying ever since to put life into it. Whether he really said it or not it is true. If we were asked to advise the republican Senators and Representatives in caucus we should say to them, "Look back to the days when you carried the country with you and see if you cannot get a lesson from those days for the present. Then you had principles and a well defined policy, and you carried these before the people and discussed them without fear; now you have neither principles nor a policy, and are afraid of the people. Then you studied the country's good; now you only ask the country to keep you in office, and do nothing for it. Then you had the capacity to devise new policies as they were required by the circumstances of the country; now you put aside the new questions which press upon you and stick to old and dead issues. That is why your party does not succeed, even against the crude and perfunctory management of your opponents."

The Southern question, or bloody shirt question, on which the radical republicans are striving to resuscitate their party, is a spent horse which was ridden successfully for the last time in the Presidential race of 1876. He dropped down in his tracks when he touched the goal in that famous course—

> And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide,
> But through it there rolled not the breath of his pride.

And the foam of his gasping lies as white on the turf as in the memorable case of Sennacherib's cavalry, so nobly sung by Byron.

Peace Probabilities.

Between at least three great European Powers there is now a wonderful unanimity—such unanimity as has hardly been seen before in history. They are all agreed on a common purpose and a common declaration. These Powers are England, Russia and Austria. Each one is determined to guard its own interests with all its might and to care as little as possible for the interests of any other, and they are all equally agreed to shout that their sole anxiety is to protect Europe, to protect political morality, to stand up for the sacredness of treaty obligations and the rights of everybody. Each one asserts its eagerness to compel other people to be virtuous, and each one regards the indulgence of its own little appetite as apart from the great general rules it is prepared to lay down for the government of the world; but the disproportion between what they do and what they declare is more apparent in some than in others. Thus we hear more of England's virtuous inclinations than we do of the virtuous inclinations of the others—first, because no doubt England has more virtue to declare than other people and more effective means of declaring it. No person acquainted with the facts can fail to recognize that England alone has more virtue than all the rest of the world together; for England has said so in a thousand ways, and she ought to know. Just now, moreover, England has the ear of the world—at least of this part of it—in virtue of community of language and the news system. Her every word is reported to us, while from Austria and Russia we hear much less distinctly and elaborately. If, however, a greater noise is made over England's intentions we learn more of Russia's acts, because for some time action in the case has fallen mostly to her share. But the issue of greatest importance now is whether the unanimity of these three Powers can be made convertible. Will each Power accept as to the government of its own conduct the views formed by the other as to what that conduct should be? With the views now held, modified by discussion, they probably will. They will compromise their differences—Russia will not give up the Treaty of San Stefano for a substitute made by England; England will not abdicate her Oriental pretensions and be left out in the cold, as that treaty would provide. Russia will make room for England; England will accommodate herself to the exigencies of a Muscovite neighbor. If a modus vivendi is earnestly sought it may always be found, and in this case it will be earnestly sought, because both Powers have a wholesome dread, fear even, of the war into which a failure to compromise would plunge them. Russia would prefer to force her treaty down England's throat; yet, when she considers how England might stretch out the conflict, and how disastrous the continued drain on her own financial resources would be, she sees the unwisdom of insisting too much. England also would like to force Russia to submit in a corner, but the difficulty of surrounding an army of half a million men actually under arms with an army on paper inclines England to adopt a modest demeanor. Hence, through the respective apprehensions of the parties as to war will result in all likelihood the preservation of peace. There may, it is true, be an accident. Russia has a great army near Constantinople, and the Ottomans, under English inspiration and encouragement, are organizing reviews to flaunt military demonstration in the face of the victor. There is the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora also, and from what was said by Lord Derby on Tuesday it is believed that the British admiral has fighting orders to act on in a contingency. With all this inflammable material in near neighborhood some trivial misunderstanding may induce an act of war. But if that possibility is excluded, if the case remains in the hands of the diplomatists till they have fairly done with it, they will in all probability preserve the peace.

Is It a Job?

In directing the suspension of the work of macadamizing Fifth avenue between Fifty-ninth and Seventy-second streets the Aldermen have practically indorsed Senator Hogan's bill placing the repaving of the whole of that avenue in the hands of a commission. This is not calculated to inspire confidence in the proposition. It is alleged that the Hogan bill means paving Fifth avenue with a concrete or "poultice" pavement without inviting bids or allowing any choice to the people. This would be simply outrageous. The people desire that Fifth avenue shall be macadamized from Washington square to Ninetieth street, and no other pavement will so well answer the purposes for which the avenue is used. The finest pleasure drive in the city ought not to be experimented with, and it is to be hoped that Senator Hogan's bill, if passed, will be promptly vetoed by the Governor.

An Unjust Apportionment.

Mr. Alvord's unjust Apportionment bill was driven through the Assembly yesterday by a strict party vote under the whip and spur of the previous question. The republicans, numbering sixty-seven, voted for its passage, and the democrats and labor reformers against it. A motion to recommit the bill, with instructions to make some trifling concession to constitutional right and common fairness, was voted down by the well drilled partisan majority. By the bill as passed New York is defrauded out of at least three members of Assembly and Brooklyn out of one or two. It remains to be seen whether the Senate will be disposed to act with sufficient honesty to at least make the bill conform with the republican bill of last year. Should the bill finally pass in its present shape it will assuredly meet the Executive veto.

A Signal Triumph Over the Railroad Lobby.

The passage of the Thurman bill by a majority of more than two to one is the most gratifying event in our recent legislative history. Though not an act of rigorous justice, but one of great leniency toward the Pacific railroads, it was strenuously resisted by them with all their resources, the most skilful of their managers having stayed in Washington to direct the fight in person. All honest men should rejoice that he was not merely beaten but humiliated. He hurried out of Washington as fast as he could go after his overwhelming defeat. Had he barely failed he might have marshalled his lobby for a new contest in the House, but his lobby was so badly routed that he will not renew the battle. It is conceded that the Senate bill will pass the House and that further opposition to it would be hopeless.

This measure is not intended to oppress the Pacific roads, but only to secure the government. It requires them to make annual contributions out of their net earnings to establish a sinking fund sufficient to secure the government against losing the money it has advanced to the roads. Notwithstanding the sinking fund the Pacific roads will still be heavily indebted to the government when the subsidy bonds mature; but the debt will not be so large that the government lien on the property will not be a sufficient security. The government will ultimately get its money back, which it would have had no reasonable prospect of doing if this bill had been defeated by the powerful lobby arrayed against it.

Senators Thurman and Edmunds deserve great praise for the vigor, courage, ability and persistence they have displayed throughout this long contest. Though belonging to different political parties they have acted together in perfect concert without a trace of jealousy. Neither of these eminent Senators ever appeared to greater advantage. Among their zealous supporters Senator Bayard has evinced conspicuous ability, and several others have fought a good fight. Their success is a resplendent triumph of honesty and public spirit. There is good reason for hoping that grasping and unscrupulous railroad corporations will not finally prove to be the masters of our legislative bodies.

"The Public Burdens Bill."

This is the name given to Mr. Fish's substitute for the New York Salary bill. It is a specious but objectionable measure—specious because it promises a reduction of city taxes; objectionable because, while increasing the power of the Board of Apportionment, it does not secure any real relief to our over-burdened citizens.

Whatever may have been the motives of those who got up the meeting last evening there is great force in the arguments urged against this bill. It is possible so to amend it as to make it useful, but it should not become a law in its present shape. No deceits must be practised on the community respecting a reduction of taxes. We are confident that without any juggle at all the expenses of the city can be reduced to the full extent of the two millions promised in the bill; but it must be an actual reduction of the money raised for city purposes, and not a mere reduction of the aggregate amount of the tax levy. If the State tax should be less in 1879 than it is in 1878 it would be a mere juggle and a delusion to represent that as a proof of economy in the municipal administration. An alleviation of the State burden is a welcome thing in itself, but since we are not indebted for it to any action of the local authorities it is not just that they should masquerade in stolen honors. What we want and have a right to insist on is a two million reduction in the actual yearly expenses of the municipal government. Furthermore, no juggling tricks must be played upon us in relation to the interest on the city debt. If the annual interest were apparently reduced by some adroit application or misapplication of the sinking fund the taxes might be lightened without the practice of any real economy. It is indispensable that there be a large diminution in the cost of the city government. This is possible because the scale of expenses which had some excuse during the reign of inflation has become intolerable now that the prices of labor and materials and the value of property have been brought down to the specie level. Necessary improvements must not be neglected in order to keep up salaries, but the pay of officers and the cost of public works must be reduced in the same ratio. The pending bill should not pass unless so amended as to secure the reduction of two millions in our actual local expenses and to make an equitable part of the reduction fall on salaries. All the officers in all the departments should be made to submit to a proportional reduction of their compensation, and this must not be trusted to the mere discretion of the Board of Apportionment.

A Cheerful Substitute.

When a certain Doctor of this city proposed that Mr. Bergh should prove his faith in the non-existence of hydrophobia by submitting to inoculation with the virus of a mad dog we strongly objected. We were greatly rejoiced, indeed, when Mr. Bergh peremptorily declined to be bitten or punctured or to have his philanthropic cuticle abraded for any such dangerous experiment. This gave a certain triumph to the Doctor, but it has come to a sudden end. An unimaginative Scotchman has taken up the cudgels for Mr. Bergh. He does not believe in rabies, but holds that the bitten people die of their own fears. He is willing to be inoculated if the Doctor is willing to part with his money. In many ways this man presents a fine subject. In the first place, it has come to be generally admitted that there is only one way to get a joke into a Scotchman's head—namely, by a surgical operation—and even then the effects are seldom alarming. Now, as good humor is the most contagious of all diseases, the chances in favor of a Scotchman getting off with a very mild attack of rabies, if there is such a thing, are very great. In the next place, he insists on having the money down. What greater proof of unimaginativeness can we have than that? If the stake was only his contingent on circumstances he would have something to worry about; whereas with the "siller" in his possession he would not have anything to get mad over. On the contrary, he would expect the Doctor to go crazy, on the principle of the man who found a despondent debtor pacing up and down his room at night and advised him to go to bed and "let the other fellow (the creditor) walk." The case is put squarely before the Doctor, who, as a lover of science, will not let the increase demanded in the stake stand in the way of a noble empiricism. The history of inoculation and vaccination is the history of great progress in the amelioration and prevention of dangerous morbific conditions, and something totally unexpected, but of great value, might result in the present case. If, for instance, the disease took off the Doctor instead of the subject, some future Goldsmith might write:—

> But soon a wonder came to light
> Which showed the rogues they lied;
> The Scotchman got well of the bite,
> The doctor 'twas that died.

AMUSEMENTS.

PARK THEATRE—"OUR ALDERMEN."

It is regrettable to see so much genuine effort as was made by the Park Theatre management in putting "Our Aldermen" on the stage absolutely thrown away. In its present shape the play is a mess of froth and trash, in which the motive of the German original is obscured and dissipated. It is not without fun of a very farcical kind—the fun of situation—but it wanders on without purpose and is chopped off into the requisite number of acts by devices that may be tolerated in a nigger minstrel sketch, but which are an affront to an audience in a comedy theatre. The story on which an excrescence of ill-pointed local politician business has been erected like a huge tumor is a simple one and capable enough of rational dramatic treatment. It is the story of a retired merchant, a hypochondriac with all sorts of imaginary diseases, who has been tempted into politics, and who, after an experience of the rough edge of things political, retires into private life, cured alike of his ambitions and his fancied diseases. There are love stories, of course—the merchant's daughter and a young architect, the architect's friend and another young lady. Whatever it may have been in the original, as "Americanized" it is almost as clumsy as "The Mighty Dollar," and has not one-fifth of the interest of that queer piece, which at least had one strong central character. Whoever remembers the "Big Bonanza," also of German origin, will see what might have been done with this piece. The old professor who went for a month on the stock market and came out to confess his utter failure in that hard school was the enjoyable centre of an amusing comedy, but although the same clever actor, Mr. James Lewis, who gave us the crabbed old professor, played the amateur politician last night, and played it with care and effect, his dramatic surroundings were such as to make success impossible. The playbill shifted the play off its centre, leading the audience to believe that the caricatured Aldermen were the be all and end all of the piece, instead of the accessories. The endeavor of the play bill was coarsely assisted by the mistaken emphasis of the adapter on the local politicians introduced and the result was a confusion which was never cleared up. There are no less than seventeen speaking characters in the piece, and all of them fairly sustained, if we except the very poor German Alderman. The costuming is, for the ladies' part, very handsome, and the stage setting is very rich. The drawing room set for the last two acts is in itself one of the finest of the kind ever seen on a New York stage. Indeed, we found ourselves pitying the players and the scene painters and everybody who had a hand in putting the piece before the public—except the adapter. Him we would flay alive. By what process he induced a capable manager to accept a play which ended one act by the trick bringing on the fire department, another by a procession of servants with brooms and children with drums and a third by an idiot rushing on to say he was ruined, we cannot imagine. There it is, however. The aldermanic business, on which so much stress is laid, is relieved a little by the ingenuity of the players, Mr. Riggs as Alderman O'Malley, and Mr. La Moyne as Alderman Birney particularly, who help to save the "caucus" scene from absolute boredom. We do not fancy Miss Cowell much out of soubrette parts, and her young lady was not a desirable pattern of culture, but there is very little use in finding particular fault where first class acting would not have redeemed itself. Mr. Thorne and Mr. Saville did their best with their parts, the scene of the former as Mr. Chatterbox, with Mr. Lewis, being the nearest approach to genuine comedy in the whole thing. As we have said, there was some laughter through the piece, but the only applause from an audience prepared to be appreciative was given to the setting of the scene we have already referred to. We hardly think that a comedy can run on coarse buffoonery, a paint brush and upholstery, although some sanguine people profess to think otherwise. It is always safe to hedge on matters where popular taste is concerned, you know.

BOOTH'S THEATRE—"THE EXILES."

The original version of the "Exiles," written by M. Nus, touched up by M. Sardou, and adapted for the classical stage of New England by Mr. Showell, was produced last night for the first time in New York at Booth's Theatre. The plot of this drama does not differ, when viewed broadly, from that of Rowe's now being played at a neighboring theatre. It is very evident that the American dramatist studied closely the original version of the play before beginning work upon his own. In fact, the second version was imitated in a large measure from the first. Both plays depict the complicated intrigue through which a certain chief of the Imperial Russian Police causes several innocent persons, one of whom is the woman he has loved in vain, to be exiled to Siberia, where they are menaced with oblivion and death; fortunately, the villain who accomplishes this project is subsequently punished, according to the stringent laws of the old school of the drama, and the curtain descends on a thoroughly happy scene. The details of this subject, which is by no means novel, differ of course in the two plays, and therein lies the distinction that must necessarily be drawn between them.

The drama, as adapted by Mr. Rowe, was a mass of incongruous effects; the play produced last night is, in many respects, a clever work. Its merits, however, may be summed up briefly; they consist chiefly in the harmonious arrangement of scenes, in the large picturesqueness of the whole and in the variety of action and characters. The first act opens in Schelm's office, a St. Petersburg bureau of police, where all the personages of the play are introduced in connection with an entirely strained and conventional motive. These personages are Max de Lussiere, a wealthy Frenchman; Count Wladimir Lanine, a Russian nobleman; Colonel Palkine, his cousin; Carcassin, a servant to Max; Nicholas Popoff, a violinist; Nadige Lanine, Wladimir's sister, and Countess Satiana Lanine, wife to Wladimir. The rôles of Carcassin and Nicholas Popoff add the comedy element to the play, an element almost wholly lacking in Mr. Rowe's version. The two female characters stray through the piece in a most sympathetic fashion and win easily the good will of the audience, who are always prone to take to heart the misfortunes of young and lovely women. The first act, as intimated above, serves as a sort of preface to the drama; but it is slow and prosaic. The same criticism scarcely holds good for the remaining four acts, which overbrim with action and progress from scene to scene without interruption. Those scenes have been ably managed by the dramatist, and there is to be found in them little of that excess of effects which distinguish the American version. But it is equally true that the entire motive of the play is merely one of those well worn sensations that have served as foundations to innumerable bad plays. In this case the bare motive is almost lost to view amid the rich and varied colorings which make the piece seem a gorgeous tableau, in which a tropical luxuriance serves as background to the snowbound and monotonous fastnesses of the north. This picturesque effect is brought out very strongly and clothes the conventional action of the piece in a brilliant garment. The play in its motive is weak and strained; in its clothing it is thoroughly effective.

What remains to be said may be summed up in a few words. The play was set upon the stage in as effective manner, many of the scenes being exceedingly beautiful. The acting was scarcely good. Miss Wainwright looked well and acted prettily, although her emotion was devoid of earnestness. Mr. Showell made a vigorous Schelm and Mr. Harkins was active and stiff as Max de Lussiere. Mr. Allen's Popoff was amusing and in some respects well conceived. Mr. Maguinnis was an excellent Carcassin. The play was received with popular approval.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—"IL TROVATORE."

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the largest audience of the present English Opera season assembled at the Grand Opera House last night to witness the presentation of "Il Trovatore." In one respect the performance was unique, although not altogether novel, inasmuch as the professional exigencies of the occasion requires singing in three languages—English, German and Italian. Occasionally the mixture was somewhat ludicrous, owing to the difference in vocalization, but smiles often gave way to a hearty appreciation of the fine musical culture shown by the several artists. The latter remark is particularly applicable to Mr. Christian Fritsch, who made his first appearance as Manrico, and to Mr. A. Blum, who sang the part of Count di Luna. Both of these gentlemen received several recalls, and Blum in his rendition of "Il Balen" captured the house by giving the well known aria with a strength and yet delicacy of expression that has rarely been equalled on the operatic stage. Fritsch adds to an excellent tenor voice fair ability as an actor—which is not often the case—but last evening exhibited several faults that may reasonably be excused in connection with the nervousness of a first appearance. Mme. Anna Granger Dow personated Leonora. This lady has a clear, round, fresh soprano voice, which she uses with great taste and with more art than she acts, for at times she seemed cold and unsympathetic. Miss Adelaide Randall as Azucena, the gypsy, added to her reputation as a rising artist and frequently elicited applause. The duet with Manrico in the fourth act was especially well sung by both of the characters. Mr. H. Wiegand as Ferrando was in good form and received his share of the honors of the evening. Taken all in all the performance was an agreeable surprise to those who did not anticipate much excellence at the hands of a company so recently organized, and for which its best friends have not from the beginning claimed more than modest merit.

LYCEUM THEATRE—"BEBE."

A large audience visited the Lyceum Theatre last evening to witness the performance of Najac and Hennequin's comedy, in four acts, entitled "Bébé." This piece, adapted for the American stage under the title of "Baby," is not unknown to New York audiences, for whom Mr. Bradford condensed it into three acts. The version played last evening by Mr. Hirschy's French comedy company was as originally performed in Paris and was broader in its humor than the American "Baby." Mme. Aurelie is a livelier person than Mme. Aurelia, and the maid is very Frenchy; indeed, all of the ladies are rather frisky in their natures. The best part of last evening's performance was the Petillon of M. Chamonin. We have seldom, if ever, seen a better characterization. He was a regular old French tutor and seemed as though he might have just slipped from out the pages of one of Balzac's novels. M. Bouleloup as Bébé's papa was capital, and M. Venlat as Bébé entered into the fun of the piece with a keen relish. No actor could help playing well before such an audience, for it met every point more than half way and laughed and applauded in the heartiest manner.

This evening "Les Crochets du Père Martin," a drama in three acts by the author of the "Two Orphans," will be produced, and on Saturday evening, for the benefit of M. Hirschy, Erckman-Chatrian's "L'Ami Fritz" will be played for the first time in America.

STANDARD THEATRE—"LITTLE BAREFOOT."

Last evening Miss Maggie Mitchell appeared before a large and enthusiastic audience at the Standard Theatre as Amry in "Little Barefoot." The character of Amry is described as a companion picture to Fanchon, and so it is. We have Miss Mitchell in the same style of part, a style in which she stands as the best exponent on the stage. If there be such a thing as the fountain of youth Maggie Mitchell must have discovered it, for she seems as young to-day as she did twenty years ago. Her portrayal of a child's character last evening had all the vitality and spontaneity of a girl of fourteen, and her face and figure carried out the idea. She was thoroughly charming from first to last and as lively as a cricket. She was called before the curtain at the end of every act and her reception throughout the play was most gratifying. The piece was prettily mounted and fairly well acted and seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed. Any one who wants to have a real, hearty, innocent laugh should see Little Barefoot, who, by the way, dances around the stage in red silk stockings and French slippers.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

This is the third week of the London Circus and Menagerie at Gilmore's Garden and the place has been well patronized. There will be another change in the programme next week.

A grand complimentary benefit to Mr. M. W. Hanley, the manager, will be given this afternoon at the Theatre Comique by Messrs. Harrigan and Hart. Mr. Tony Pastor has contributed a number of performers from his own theatre, and a score or more of volunteers will add to the interest of the occasion.

Mr. Jerome Hopkins, the composer of the opera of "Dumb Love," has sent a circular to the stockholders of the Academy of Music requesting each of them to remit to him from $15 to $25, for which he proposes to return parquet and balcony seats. He takes this course believing that these gentlemen should exhibit practical interest in the presentation of "the first secular new opera ever offered at the Academy." The opera is to be given on May 7 for the Orpheon Free School fund.

The sixth and last public rehearsal of Theodore Thomas' Orchestra is announced to take place this afternoon at Steinway Hall. The following is the programme:—Overture, "Midsummer Night's Dream," Mendelssohn; cavatina, "Flowers of the Valley" (Euryanthe), Weber, Mrs. E. A. Osgood; concerto No. 1 in E flat, Liszt, Mr. Max Pinner; introduction, "Tristan and Isolde"—finale, "Isolde's Death," Wagner—Isolde, Mrs. E. A. Osgood; symphony No. 5, C minor, op. 67, Beethoven; allegro con brio; andante con moto, allegro, finale.

PRINCE GORTSCHAKOFF'S REPLY

Considered in London as Pacific and Argumentative.

RUSSIAN MILITARY PREPARATIONS.

Massing Troops in Roumania and Occupying Strategic Positions.

ROUMANIA'S GLOOMY PROSPECT.

Bismarck's Home Policy—The University Boat Race.

[BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

LONDON, April 11, 1878.

The pacific and argumentative tone of the Russian reply to Lord Salisbury's circular is recognized with satisfaction by the London morning papers as indicating the purpose and giving the hope of finding an arrangement by negotiation.

AUSTRIA SATISFIED.

The Daily Telegraph's Vienna despatch says Austria seems to consider Prince Gortschakoff's answer satisfactory, and thinks England can exact no further assurance than therein contained previous to the Congress.

A CONGRESS ALONE CAN SETTLE IT.

The Times, while doing justice to the spirit by which it presumes Prince Gortschakoff's arguments are dictated, maintains that, whatever their value, a Congress of the Powers alone is competent to determine their validity. It says:—"It is not for this country nor Austria to decide the matter from its own point of view, and still less is this the province of Russia. Probably every Power could make out a strong case for its own interests, but no Power is adequate to judge of the manner in which other interests are affected, and we claim that both Lord Salisbury's and Prince Gortschakoff's circular should be submitted to the judgment of Europe."

THE HORIZON AGAIN OVERCAST.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphs as follows:—"The horizon is again overcast. The change is attributed to the speeches made in the British Parliament, to the consequent alteration in the attitude of the Austrian Cabinet and the apparent hesitation of Germany to act as mediator. It is believed in official circles that some of Lord Salisbury's remarks on Monday indicate an intention of going to war."

WILL ENGLAND TREAT SEPARATELY?

The Agence Russe states that a short circular accompanying Prince Gortschakoff's reply invites England to formulate her proposals. The Times' Vienna correspondent remarks that this seems to point to an intention of trying to come to a separate understanding with England, as was attempted with Austria.

THE POWERS AGREE WITH ENGLAND.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times says the attempts at mediation seem to have made it probable that the Powers will only consent to participate in the revision of the Treaty of San Stefano on the same condition as demanded by England.

BOSNIA PROMISED TO SERVIA.

The Berlin Post says Austrian agents have informed their government that Russia has promised Bosnia to Servia in the event of the renewal of hostilities. This news has produced a bad impression at Vienna.

VIEWS OF THE VIENNA PRESS.

The Vienna Fremdenblatt says:—"Peace can only be maintained by Russia modifying the Treaty of San Stefano in conjunction with the other Powers." The Presse, of the same city, considers that England has already gained a moral victory for herself and Europe.

ANXIETY IN LONDON.

Though it is generally considered in London that the debate in Parliament on the address thanking the Queen for calling out the reserves has placed the government's policy in a clearer light, Lord Derby's statement concerning the secret determinations of the Cabinet, which led him to resign, is the subject of much anxious curiosity. It is reported in the clubs that they are connected with orders already sent to Admiral Hornby, which are contingent on Russian movements near Constantinople.

ENGLAND ENGAGING TRANSPORTS.

A Berlin special to the News says, in spite of denials, four of the finest steamers of the Hamburg-American Packet Line have been engaged by the British government.

RUSSIAN PRECAUTIONS.

Russian officials of rank at Bucharest declare that they fully expect the English fleet to succeed in forcing its way into the Black Sea in the event of war. Hence their efforts to increase the facilities for land transport over lines not accessible to interruption from the fleet, and as far distant as possible from the Austrian frontier. They have taken measures for constructing a military railroad between Bolgrad, on the newly completed Bender and Galatz line, and Ismail, and also a short line connecting Rene with the wharves on the Danube.

PREPARING FOR AUSTRIA.

A special despatch from Bucharest to the Political Correspondence of Vienna reports that on Monday the advance guards of the Seventh and Eleventh Russian Army corps began to cross from Rustchuk to Giurgevo, in order to occupy the line from Giurgevo to Bucharest. The Roumanian government, in order to avoid alarming the public, denies that the occupation has commenced, but it nevertheless is an undoubted fact.

SECURING POSITIONS.

Russian troops, especially artillery, have arrived at various places on the Roumanian bank of the Danube. They have entered Fratesti and command the railway station at Giurgevo. They have also occupied important positions on the Nyashiov River.

LAYARD CHECKMATING RUSSIA.

A special despatch to the Vienna Political Correspondence from Constantinople states that Mr Layard has succeeded in paralyzing for the present Russia's endeavors to obtain the friendship of the Porte. In view of the hourly increasing tension of Anglo-Russian relations the greatest importance is attached to a long interview Mr. Layard had on Monday with Reouf Pacha and Osman Pacha, who are paramount in military affairs.

NICHOLAS IS PEREMPTORY.

A special despatch dated Constantinople, Wednesday, states that the Grand Duke Nicholas continues to demand the forts on the Upper Bosphorus. General Nelidoff will have an interview with the Sultan on the subject to-day. The Grand Duke has also demanded the immediate evacuation of Batoum in accordance with the treaty, indicating that in the event of non-compliance complications may arise.

A CONTRADICTION.

A special despatch to the Daily News from Constantinople says it is untrue that the Russians have demanded Kavak and Bujukdere.

SICKNESS AMONG THE RUSSIANS.

A despatch from Pera states that 14,000 Russians are sick from San Stefano to Adrianople, nearly half of them with typhus, so that the Russian officers regard their position as very unsatisfactory.

THE TIMES' VIEW OF THE DEBATE.

The Times says that it cannot but share Lord Hartington's regret that Sir Wilfrid Lawson was not content with the debate in Parliament without going to a division on his amendment. "The whole discussion," it says, "has materially tended to clear up the obscurities of a perilous situation and it has certainly brought the prospect of peace nearer than before. But no practical inference can be drawn from the fact that sixty-four members of the House of Commons think that the present juncture is not a great emergency, while it is possible a good many erroneous and mischievous conclusions will be drawn from it both at home and abroad."

BAD EFFECT ABROAD.

The debate has not had the same reassuring effect abroad, though the judgment founded on the telegraphic summaries thereof may be reversed on the receipt of the full text of the speeches.

DISAPPROVAL AT VIENNA.

The speeches of Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury are thought at Vienna to point to the probability of war and to hold out small hope of a congress, which is there believed to be the only possible way of reaching a pacific solution. This supposed attitude of England is not approved at Vienna, because the Austrian government has made no provision for the eventuality of a final failure of the Congress project. It is said, however, that when the necessity of deciding is forced on Count Andrassy he will undoubtedly resist Russia's demands and make an alliance with England, provided he can carry the Court party with him.

GLOOMY PROSPECT FOR ROUMANIA.

With this contingency in view Russia has taken a firm grip on Roumania, and should the government attempt to resist her will the country would find itself in a most embarrassing position. Therefore, it is by no means certain that the final policy of Roumania will coincide fully with the present manifestations of popular feeling. Should the war be confined to England and Russia Roumania can manage to escape serious consequences, but should Austria enter into action the principality cannot avoid being crushed almost irreparably between the contending forces, no matter which belligerent she chooses as an ally.

CORRECTNESS OF GHIKA'S REPORT.

The Roumanian government officially reaffirms the correctness of Prince Ghika's reports of his interviews with Prince Gortschakoff when the latter used threatening language.

FEELING THE PRESSURE.

In consequence of the urgent demands of Russia M. Cogalniceano, Roumanian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has asked Prince Charles to recall M. Baltchano, the Roumanian Representative at Vienna. In the Senate yesterday Minister Cogalniceano refused to state what course the government would take if Russia demanded the conclusion of a convention to secure the passage of her troops. M. Stourdza complained that the absence of M. Bratiano, the Premier, prevented the government from acting, although Russia was commencing her threatened occupation.

TURKEY CANNOT REMAIN NEUTRAL.

Apropos of the rumored orders sent to Admiral Hornby, a St. Petersburg letter in Tuesday's Berlin Norddeutsche Zeitung, likely to come from an authorized source, says:—"Turkey cannot be permitted to remain neutral in an Anglo-Russian war. If she allies herself with Russia she will have to give up Constantinople as a pledge of her fidelity; if she sides with England Constantinople, Gallipoli, Bayukdere and the European shores of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles will be occupied by Russian troops at any risk. The Russian fortifications around Constantinople render the conquest of the city certain, and Russian torpedoes will soon teach the English vessels to keep at a distance, lest a return to Besika Bay should be cut off." This letter possibly was the foundation for the rumors circulating in the lobbies of the House of Commons last night that the Russians had made a formal demand to occupy Constantinople.

NOTES FROM STAMBOUL.

According to a despatch from Constantinople the Khedive of Egypt will visit that city in two weeks to pay his respects to the Sultan.

The health of Ahmed Vefyk Effendi, President of the Turkish Council of Ministers, has been re-established.

It is announced that a review of 20,000 Turkish troops will be held near Constantinople on Thursday.

It is stated that Hobart Pacha has obtained a short leave of absence for the purpose of visiting England.

BISMARCK'S HOME POLICY.

The semi-official Provincial Correspondence, of Berlin, publishes an inspired article, declaring that Prince Bismarck is convinced of the benefits of a policy of reciprocity, involving moderate protection of native industry, and hopes to gain a firm majority in the Reichstag therefor.

ISAAC BUTT AND THE HOME RULERS.

The Standard says Mr. Butt has announced that he cannot manage the home rule party while in Dublin, and as he is unable to devote his whole time to Parliament he must beg to be relieved from the responsibility of the leadership. It is understood that his resignation is due to the revival of the obstructionist tactics. The Home Rule Parliamentary Committee is endeavoring to induce Mr. Butt to reconsider his determination. He is expected in London to-day and his definite decision, therefore, will not be delayed.

THE EARL OF LEITRIM'S FUNERAL.

The Earl of Leitrim was buried in St. Michan's Church, at Dublin, yesterday. A crowd of about three hundred hissed, hooted and cheered outside of the church.

RACING IN ENGLAND.

PRINCE GEORGE WINS THE GREAT NORTHAMPTONSHIRE STAKES AT NORTHAMPTON.

[BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

LONDON, April 10, 1878.

The race for the Great Northamptonshire Stakes took place at Northampton, to-day, and a field of ten starters came to the post. The race was won by Mr. W. S. Crawfurd's bay horse Prince George, Mr. Acton's chestnut colt Playfair second, Mr. Matthew Dawson's bay colt Il Gladiatore third. The latest betting was four to one against Prince George, six to one against Playfair, and twelve to one against Il Gladiatore.

The following is a

PREVIOUS PERFORMANCE OF THE WINNER.

Prince George made his first appearance as a three-year-old in 1866, and ran seven races, scoring one victory. He began at the Newmarket First Spring Meeting in the Prince of Wales' Stakes (handicap), one mile and seventeen yards, which was won by Earl of Dartrey by half a length, Geryon second, Tartine third, Prince George fourth. Three days afterward, at the same place, Prince George again ran fourth for the Second Welter Handicap Plate. At Bath, May 23, he ran in the Beaufort Handicap with 79 lbs. up, and was last in a field of ten. His next appearance was at Goodwood for the Chesterfield Cup, when again, with 79 lbs. in the saddle, he landed fifth at the finish, Coomassie, Monaco, Wallsend and Dalham being in front, while nineteen others were behind him at the finish. At Doncaster, September 13, Prince George was beaten by a head by Lady Patricia in the Cleveland Handicap, one mile. His next appearance was at Shrewsbury, November 17, for the Shrewsbury Cup (handicap) of £960, about two miles, with 83 lbs. up, when he beat Miss Lizzie, Lady Malden and eleven others Prince George closed his three-year-old racing by running second to Pageant at Warwick, November 24, for the Great Midland Counties Handicap of £485, two miles. There were seven behind him. As a four-year-old Prince George ran four times, winning once. He started first at Ascot, June 13, for the Royal Hunt Cup (handicap) of £1,210, one mile, straight, and was third to Crusade and Sutton, nineteen being behind him. On Tuesday, August 1, at Goodwood, he won the Goodwood Stakes (handicap), £910, two miles and a half, beating Gloucester, Rylstone and nine others, but two days afterward he did not get a place in the Chesterfield Cup, one mile and a quarter, Mousquetaire, Harbinger, Dalham and Hesper being in front of him. Prince George closed the year at the Newmarket Second October in the Cesarewitch Stakes (handicap). There were five in front and nineteen behind him at the finish. The race given above was his first appearance in his five-year-old form, and he commenced the year by making a win of it.

FREDERICK SAVOIL'S CRIME.

A FRENCH CANADIAN'S STRANGE METHOD OF EXHIBITING AFFECTION BY MURDER.

BIDDEFORD, Me., April 10, 1878.

This morning Savage, the murderer of Rose Vincent, was brought before Judge Chase's Court, in Saco, and was fully committed to jail to await trial. He was very much excited and shed tears very copiously.

Before Savage made his confession last night he called Officer Grant one side and asked what the penalty was in this State for such a murder. When told imprisonment for life he at once turned to Chief of Police Dearing and said, "Well, I know her; I take her down bottom boat and choke her death. We both been drinking some. I kill her cause me love her too much." It is believed by the officers that Savage drugged the liquor he gave the woman. Savage married his first wife in Canada, and it is said she died from his cruelty. Rose Vincent, the murdered woman, has two sons in Methuen, Mass., who have been telegraphed to come and take charge of the body, which remains at the Biddeford police station.

HISTORY OF THE MAN AND HIS VICTIM.

The following are believed to be the facts relating to the acquaintance of the murderer and his victim:—The murdered woman was Mrs. Rose Mignault Vincent, her maiden name being Mignault. She had lived in Methuen, and worked in the cotton carding room of the Methuen mills until some five months ago. She had also done housework in various places, but until Friday last had worked for a French family at South Lawrence, since which time she had not been seen here. Mrs. Vincent had a husband and four young children living at Three Rivers, Canada, and her two oldest boys, Eli and Gustavus, worked respectively in the Methuen Mill and Tenney's hat shop, and are seventeen and nineteen years of age. The names of the four children at Three Rivers are Mary, Clara, Eddie and Arthur. The husband came to Methuen for his family two years ago and went away with the four smaller children, the woman promising to follow, but this she afterward said she did not ean to do. The son, Gustavus, said there was no trouble between his father and mother, the latter remaining here only to earn money, but the woman had a bad reputation throughout the town. The murderer's name is Frederick Savoil, or, in English, Savage. He has a sister, Mrs. Clarissa Raymond, living in Lougee's block, Methuen, who tells the following story about him. She says Frederick first came to Methuen two years ago, and for a few weeks worked in the weaving room of the Methuen mills. He is a widower, but has seven children, all quite small. While at Methuen he fell in love with Mrs. Vincent, was with her much, and, after leaving town, corresponded with her. He sent for her several times to come to him, and last Friday or Saturday she packed her things in a trunk and ran away, saying nothing to her friends of her intentions. Savage's wife died six years ago. He was last seen in Methuen four months ago, when he stopped but a few days, visiting his sister and Mrs. Vincent. The woman had no money in any bank in Lawrence, and was a very poor woman, working for small wages. The theory of her friends is that Savage enticed her to Biddeford for the purpose of putting her out of the way, or that, after her arrival last Saturday, they had trouble, and perhaps he became jealous, and determined to kill her. Mrs. Raymond, Savage's sister, was deeply afflicted, and said her brother was a good man and his victim a very bad woman, and repeatedly asked, "When will they hang him." Mrs. Vincent's sons are very much agitated over the matter.

CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY.

YANKTON, D. T., April 10, 1878.

Deputy Sheriff Edwards returned to-day from the Crow Creek Indian Agency, where he was sent to serve replevin papers for the release of the property of Dr. Livingston, ex-Indian agent, from the hands of the military. On his arrival at Crow Creek he was arrested by order of General Hammond, placed in the guard house and prevented from performing his duty. It is probable that General Hammond and Lieutenant Dougherty, the latter of whom is acting agent at Crow Creek, will be arrested and brought before the Territorial Court at Yankton, where the matter will be fully ventilated. Lieutenant Dougherty bases his action upon the position that civil law is subservient to military law, and that, therefore, officers of the court have no rights in Indian country. A condition of affairs similar to that at Crow Creek exists at the Lower Brule and Cheyenne River agencies, the civil agents there having been ejected and the agencies taken possession of by the military.

CANADIAN INDIANS.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 10, 1878.

In the Senate to-day Hon. Mr. Scott, referring to the threatened Indian troubles in the Northwest, stated that the law prohibiting the killing of buffalo by half breeds had been relaxed, and half breeds were now put on an equality with Indians and can kill buffalo when they require to do so. The government were in constant communication with the mounted police, and there was not the least possible cause for apprehending a hostile alliance between the Blackfeet and Sioux.

SEVERE STORM IN THE NORTHWEST.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 10, 1878.

A heavy storm is raging along the line of the Dakota division of the Northern Pacific Railroad. The cuts are drifted full of snow, and trains have been delayed for a half a day. Telegraph lines are down and news is meagre. This is the first interruption of travel on the road this winter. The storm, which is composed of snow, rain and wind, is moving south.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO.

A STOCK DIVIDEND INSTEAD OF CASH—PRESIDENT GARRETT'S EXPLANATION OF THE SUBSTITUTION—A CONSERVATIVE POLICY TO REDUCE DEBT.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BALTIMORE, Md., April 10, 1878.

The action of the Board of Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to-day in substituting stock for the usual cash dividend has created considerable surprise, and the action of the board was the subject of comment among bankers and business men generally. The board ratified the settlement of the State debt, according to the recent action of the Legislature, by consenting to the payment of the sum named in the act, $366,000.

The Finance Committe, which has had under consideration the subject of the dividend, reported the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, that a dividend of four per cent be declared on the capital stock of the main stem for the half year which ended 31st March ultimo, payable in the stock of the company on and after the 15th of May proximo.

PRESIDENT GARRETT'S EXPLANATION.

In explanation of the resolution, in connection with the recommendation of the Finance Committee to declare a dividend in stock, President Garrett remarked that although during the present administration, which had continued for twenty years, the dividends had been uniformly made in cash, even during the great war, at six, eight, nine and ten per cent per year, yet the form proposed by the committee was not at all novel in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio Company. At various periods prior to 1858, when the company needed money, rather than press sales of its bonds and securities it adopted the conservative plan of using a portion of its earnings by borrowing the sum from the stockholders and issuing therefor its stock. A large amount of the cost of the road between Cumberland and the Ohio River was supplied under this system. In order to aid the Pittsburg and Connellsville, the Marietta and Cincinnati, the Virginia Midland, and to construct the Chicago, the Baltimore short line, the Cincinnati and Baltimore roads and other enterprises associated with its interests and development, the Baltimore and Ohio Company created a floating debt which it is the policy of the company to liquidate rapidly.

INTEREST IN CONNECTING LINES.

The company owns large amounts of the stocks and securities of its connecting lines, some of which it will be desirable to hold for the purpose of maintaining our interest and influence in regard to the policies and co-operative relations of those companies. But large amounts of the bonds of those companies now held can properly be sold when sufficiently advantageous rates can be obtained for them. The company has pursued so conservative a policy that it has heretofore paid from its net earnings through the action of its sinking funds, and by payments in cash from its net earnings $11,651,279 67 of mortgage indebtedness; and the annual earnings upon the present investments in its sinking funds and appropriations for the payment of its mortgage indebtedness amount to $682,000 annually.

PAYMENT OF FLOATING DEBT.

In pursuance of this conservative policy the committee has recommended that a portion of the earnings realized within the last six months—viz., four per cent, being $525,768, be used for the payment of the floating debt, and that stock be issued therefor. It will be noted that this dividend will be payable in the common stock of the company. This sum is thus added to the capital, on which no interest will be paid, but only such dividends as may be declared from the net earnings, at the discretion of the directors from time to time on the capital stock. While the floating debt has already been materially decreased yet this action will insure its more rapid reduction.

After the President's remarks the resolution of the Committee of Finance for the declaration of the dividend was unanimously adopted. The earnings for March on the main stem and branches were $1,137,413 94, being $44,419 95 more than for the same month of the preceding year.

RAILROAD CAR BURNED.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

EASTON, Pa., April 10, 1878.

The passenger car attached to the emigrant and express freight train leaving here for the West at half-past one A. M. via Lehigh Valley and East Pennsylvania railroads was totally destroyed by fire this morning, at Chain Dam, about one mile from this place. The car belonged to the Philadelphia and Reading road, and caught fire from the heating apparatus under the car. There were but few passengers in the car, all of whom escaped uninjured.

COLONEL SHEPHERD'S CASE.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

NEWPORT, R. I., April 10, 1878.

General Hancock has instructed General Vogdes, at Fort Adams, to allow Colonel Shepherd to proceed to New York with his family. He can remain away one week, by order of General Hancock, if necessary, to settle his family. At the expiration of that term he will return here and serve out his sentence of one year's confinement in Fort Adams. Colonel Shepherd accordingly went to New York with his family to-night.

GREENBACK CONVENTION.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 10, 1878.

The Greenback National State Convention was held here to-day. Only about one-third of the counties in the State were represented. E. N. Gates was appointed Chairman. The platform adopted demands the unconditional repeal of the Resumption act, the remonetization of silver, making it a full legal tender; that the coinage of silver be placed on the same footing with gold, and that Congress shall not authorize the issuance of interest bearing bonds of any kind. The following ticket was nominated:—For Secretary of State, M. Farnsworth; for Treasurer, M. L. Devin, and for Attorney General, C. H. Jackson.

A DISHONEST BANK OFFICER.

DENVER, Col., April 10, 1878.

It is publicly announced here that H. A. McIntire, president of the First National Bank of Lake City and vice-president of the First National Bank of Colorado Springs, has absconded with $70,000. The first disclosures were made quite recently, and showed that McIntire had in the interim following the death of the late president of the bank at Colorado Springs, and before the vacancy was supplied, secured from the deposits of this bank between $30,000 and $40,000. In addition to this he has hypothecated stock of the two banks with which he was connected amounting to $25,000. It is feared that the effect upon the Lake City Bank will be irreparable, and that further disclosures will swell the estimate already made.

DINNER TO BAYARD TAYLOR.

Mr. Whitelaw Reid gave a farewell dinner to Bayard Taylor last evening at the Union League Club. The guests included Mayor Ely, ex-Governor Samuel J. Tilden, Secretary Sherman, ex-Secretary Fish, ex-Secretary McCulloch, Judge Pierrepont, late Minister to the Court of St. James; William Cullen Bryant, General Hancock, Peter Cooper, John J. Astor, Royal Phelps, President Barnard, John Bigelow, Wayne MacVeagh, William Walter Phelps, Charles Dudley Warner, William D. Howells, Frederick E. Church, Murat Halstead and others.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

The facts of a mysterious stabbing affray have just leaked out in Newark. According to a statement made to a reporter last night by Mr. James H. Van Houten, residing at No. 254 Bank street, that gentleman was on his way home from Pythagoras Lodge, F. and A. M., on Monday night when he was met by two strangers in Prospect street, near the corner of Elm (the lodge room being in the neighborhood). One of the two grasped Mr. Van Houten by the hand and gave him a Masonic grip. The other stabbed him in the neck, and inflicted a deep but not dangerous wound. The two then fled, and Mr. Van Houten made his way back to the lodge room and from thence was taken to his home and a physician called in. The wound was found to be close to a vital part—just grazing it. Mr. Van Houten has no idea who his assailants were. He says he has had some trouble with a brother Mason, who has brought charges of unmasonic conduct against him in Pythagoras Lodge, but refuses to believe that any mason would essay the rôle of an attempted assassin. He has also had trouble with his landlord, Colonel Burroughs. On Monday morning Mr. Van Houten says he received an anonymous note warning him not to attend the lodge that night. He has made no complaint to the authorities because of his inability to give any information as to the identity of his assailants.

SELLING CHURCH PROPERTY.

The trustees of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, Brooklyn, yesterday received permission from Judge Gilbert, in the Supreme Court of Kings county, to sell certain of the property at the corner of Clinton street and Second place.

ASSAULT WITH AN AXE.

Mary Summers, of No. 319 Water street, appeared before Justice Murray, at the Tombs, yesterday, and charged William Powers with having assaulted her with an axe. He was held in $1,000 bail to answer.

A LUNATIC'S FREAK.

James Mehan, a former railroad employé, yesterday morning unlocked a number of switches in the Morris and Essex Railroad yard at Hoboken, and the switchmen called Officer Hammond, who arrested him. At the police station yesterday it was learned that the man was a lunatic.

OBITUARY.

EDWIN MIDDLETON ALMONTE.

"Ted" Almonte, the clown, whose antics in the sawdust of the circus and upon the stage have made him familiar to the public for years, died last evening. True to the instincts of his fun-loving nature, "Ted's" last words were a jest. With a heroism common in his calling Almonte refused to succumb to disease, and, in spite of the complication of ailments that were slowly eating his life away, he declined to cast aside his motley, and day after day uttered his jests in the ring. On Tuesday afternoon he appeared at the matinée at Barnum's, but no one of those who smiled at his antics fancied for a moment they were looking upon a man who was about to sink into the grave. Yesterday Almonte was confined to his bed at his residence, No. 121 Third avenue, through the day, although he seemed to suffer little, and engaged in friendly conversation with such of his acquaintances as called upon him. Late in the afternoon he fell into a deep sleep, and awaking suddenly, passed away without a struggle.

Edwin Middleton Almonte was born in England, and at the time of his death was thirty-five years of age. When a youth he developed quite a taste for the profession he later on adopted. He was first engaged by Fred Jonette, and soon after travelled with Benjamin Bonn's Russian Circus. He was then three seasons with Sanger's Circus, and after that was engaged by Howe & Cushing. With them he came to the United States, where he passed two seasons, returning then to England, where he was employed by Hengler. He soon came back to the United States, and joined John H. Murray's Circus, and afterward Joel E. Warren's Great Pacific Circus. Since that he has been with Cushing & Cole and Jack Hudson. He went to South America with Chainie, and it is believed that he caught some of the malarial affections there. Of late he has been travelling with Barnum's circus, and this season he opened with it at the Rink and appeared there up to the time of his death. Almonte died of a combination of diseases, among which were enlargement of the heart and liver and consumption. He was Vice President of the Equestrian Benevolent Society, which organization will conduct his funeral on Sunday next at two o'clock. He leaves behind him a wife and two children.

CAPTAIN W. H. COOPER.

The latest mail advices from England report the death of Captain W. H. Cooper, one of the best known patrons of coaching in England. The deceased gentleman was identified with sporting pursuits very early in life, as he hunted with the Old Surrey as a boy and figured among the hard riding undergraduates at Oxford in the days of Mr. Drake and Jem Hills. A strong taste for driving also marked him out at the University, and this characterized him throughout his life, as, although he occasionally owned a few race horses, he would rather drive down "the afternoon Dorking" than go ten miles to see them run. In conjunction with the late Mr. Chandos Pole Captain Cooper horsed and drove the Brighton coach in 1872; but since then "Cooper's coach," as it was called, did the Dorking road, and the start from Hatchett's with such an artist as Captain Cooper on the box has been one of the London season sights. Last year an accident befell the coach by an overturn, owing to the pole breaking, and Captain Cooper sustained injuries which, although at the time not considered serious, were ultimately the cause of death. Captain Cooper, who was liked and respected by all who knew him, was in his fifty-ninth year.

JOSEPH N. CUNNINGHAM.

Joseph N. Cunningham, the well known civil engineer, died at his residence in East Providence, R. I., on Tuesday evening. He commenced his profession as assistant civil engineer on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. He was also employed on the Boston, Providence and Stonington railroads. He was chief engineer on the railroad leading from Bridgewater, Mass., to Fall River, and he was also chief engineer of the Taunton and Mansfield, Norfolk county, Newburyport and several other branches of different roads. He was about sixty-eight years of age, and had been ill for some time.

GEORGE C. STANFIELD, PAINTER.

The death is announced by mail from London, in the fifty-sixth year of his age, of George C. Stanfield, the landscape painter. The deceased artist was the eldest son of Clarkson Stanfield, the world renowned marine painter, who died in 1867. He was born about 1822 and studied with his father. His first appearance on the walls of the Royal Academy was in 1856, when he exhibited a "Scene in Valais." His landscapes were bright in color, and are stated to have been rather meagre in sentiment.

JOHN L. BUNCE.

Mr. John L. Bunce, President of the Phœnix National Bank, in Hartford, Conn., died yesterday at the age of seventy-six years. He was cashier of the bank twenty-three years and president eighteen years. He was one of the most highly esteemed citizens and one of the best known bankers in Connecticut.

REV. WILLIAM B. KINNEY.

On Tuesday evening the Rev. William B. Kinney died at his residence in Westerly, R. I. He was about thirty years of age. The greater part of his work has been in Canada East. He was a native of Mattapoisett, Mass., where his remains have been interred.

VERY REV. BASIL KEATING.

The Very Rev. Father Basil Keating, C. P., rector of St. Mary's Retreat, Dunkirk, N. Y., died yesterday at St. Michael's Monastery, West Hoboken, N. J. He was in his thirty-ninth year at the time of his demise.

MAJOR E. WELCH.

Major E. Welch, formerly post trader at Fort McPherson and Camp Sheridan, Neb., and lately one of the heaviest property owners in the Black Hills, died at Deadwood on Tuesday.

MARTIN DE HERRERA.

A cable despatch from Madrid announces that Señor Martin de Herrera, formerly Minister of Justice, is dead.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE.

The funeral of Mr. John G. Farrington, one of the oldest residents of Harlem, took place yesterday afternoon, from St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, at Fourth avenue and 127th street. Mr. Farrington was born in Westchester county in 1798, but came to Harlem in 1812 and obtained a position in a grocery store. He had kept a store in the Twelfth ward for over sixty years.

WILLIAM M. TWEED'S ILLNESS.

William M. Tweed is very sick at Ludlow Street Jail, confined to his bed, and is said to be afflicted with Bright's disease of the kidneys. Dr. Carnochan, his physician, was with him at a late hour last night, and regards Mr. Tweed's condition as likely to lead to fatal results, unless there is an improvement very speedily.

A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

Bridgeton, N. J., boasts of a negro inhabitant named Jeremiah Welles, who is 112 years old. He was born in 1766, in the old tavern kitchen at Cantwell's Bridge, on the Appoquininink Creek, in St. George's Hundreds, Newcastle county, Del., and when a mere babe was sold as a slave by his father to the proprietor of the tavern. At the age of nine he was sold to a Mr. Abey Cole, with whom he lived in bondage for twenty-six years. He remembers the breaking out of the war of the Revolution, and has a perfect recollection of many occurrences of those stirring times. During his slavery days with Cole he married and raised four children, three of whom are living now. In 1839 he married a Miss Susannah Buck, he being seventy-three and she eighteen years of age, by whom he had one daughter. With this daughter, who is thirty-five years of age, he now lives. The old negro shows the marks of his great age in his shrivelled skin and attenuated body. Although he has drunk whiskey and used tobacco all his life he does not betray any marks of dissipation. He has a deep chest, sinewy limbs and a strong, clear voice, while the grasp of his hand is as firm and as steady as it was half a century ago. His eyesight, however, is very poor. Twelve years ago, the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, he was made a citizen of the United States.

ARRESTED FOR MALPRACTICE.

Rosella Worcester, a "female physician," was arrested last night by Captain Williams, of the Twenty-ninth precinct, at her residence, No. 149 Charles street, upon a charge of malpractice. Mrs. Worcester was taken to the Thirtieth street station house, where she gave her age as sixty-two years and her occupation as that of a midwife, and from thence to the New York Hospital to be identified by her alleged victim. The young woman was admitted to the New York Hospital a few days ago suffering from peritonitis, and yesterday, as she was in a dying condition, the Coroner was notified and took her ante-mortem statement, upon which the arrest was made.

LUNATICS TRANSFERRED.

The transfer of chronic insane patients belonging to Queens county—heretofore taken care of in State institutions at the county's expense—to the new County Asylum at North Hempstead has begun under the approval of the State Board of Charities. Yesterday thirteen of these unfortunates, twelve women and one man, were brought down from Poughkeepsie and placed in their new quarters. The transfer was made under the personal direction of the three County Superintendents of the Poor, assisted by Constable J. C. Ayres, of Glen Cove, and accompanied by Supervisors Lawrence and Clark. There are between twenty and thirty other patients at Ovid and elsewhere to be similarly transferred.

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Board of Public Docks yesterday, President Westervelt in the chair, a communication was received from Captain S. B. Luce, commanding officer of the United States training ship Minnesota, notifying the Board of his intention to anchor the Minnesota for the summer in the North River, off Twenty-third street, and asking that a suitable landing for ships' boats be constructed at or near the foot of that street. Captain Luce states that the ship's old position off Castle Garden is objectionable in many respects. It is dangerous to run small boats through such a fleet of tugs as are continually passing that place. The landing is unsuitable with a strong wind blowing from any point between south and northwest, and in fact many days it is impossible to use it, as the water washes over it. Foreign men-of-war would, in the opinion of Captain Luce, be much benefited by and would appreciate such a landing as he requests. The Board granted the request and authorized the Engineer to do the work at a cost not exceeding $100.

After a long sitting in executive session the Board adjourned.

THE BROOKLYN PARKS.

The receipts by the Brooklyn Park Commission for the month of March were $6,777 07. This sum, with the balance already in the treasury, amounted to $11,375 29. The expenditures for the same period amounted to $7,883 72. The appropriation for the maintenance of the parks was cut down this year from $125,000 to $100,000. This has necessitated a reduction of the wages of the park laborers and of putting the park police on half time.

THE COURTS.

Carrying on Lotteries Forbidden by the Constitution.

TROUBLES OF A SURETY.

A Coney Island Fire-Eater in a New Role.

In the United States Circuit Court before Judge Wallace, a cause was tried yesterday involving the question of what constituted a lottery. The action was brought by the Southern Association for the benefit of widows and orphans of the Southern States for breach of contract in the failure to comply with the conditions of a bond, which failure was alleged to have been made by John C. Butts, Benjamin Wood, Charles H. Murry, Nathaniel S. Morse and Henry Colton. Messrs. Alexander & Green appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. Luther R. Marsh for the defendants. In July, 1867, the Legislature of Virginia passed an act authorizing the plaintiffs to distribute, by a system of chances other than a lottery system, all the lands of which they were in possession for the benefit of the beneficiaries of their association, and the act sets forth that they were to be exempt from all the penalties of carrying on a lottery. The members of the association very speedily found after their incorporation that they were not sufficiently versed in the ways of "raffles" to establish it with success, so they entered into an agreement with a man named W. G. Spears to take charge of it. Mr. Spears did not succeed, and he ultimately sold the contract to J. C. Betts, of New York. Betts entered into a contract with the association to pay them $1,000 a month, and also to pay the General Manager of the Association a salary of $4,500. The manager, under this appointment, was Colonel C. Q. Tompkins. Betts continued the raffle for about seven months, but did not pay the association a cent, and the action was brought to recover on the bond of $50,000, which Betts gave for the faithful performance of his duty. A lawyer named Elmore was the only witness, who testified that he became acquainted with the scheme of the plaintiff through Spears, who became a client of his, who employed him in the negotiation between Spears and Betts. He knew the modus operandi of the drawing and described it to the Court. He said that there were seventy-two numbers; that those numbers were publicly displayed; thirteen of these were prizes, the remainder were blanks. These tickets being numbered tickets were placed in a box, the wheel of which was turned by a boy, whose eyes were covered with a handkerchief. The tickets were issued at $1 each. If one of the lucky numbers was drawn it was equivalent to drawing $5; if two, $25; if three, $200; if four, $500. He had played himself and had won as much as $80, but when he had got through his loss was about $12 on the entire drawing. There was next read the deposition of Henry A. Wise, ex-Governor of Virginia, which stated that the association was organized for good objects, and that he did not see anything wrong about it. He gave some of the names of the incorporators, among whom were T. G. Dudley; his own son, J. A. Wise; Dr. Noble, a prominent physician of Richmond, and T. M. Balard, a man well known in Richmond. Some little laughter was occasioned in court by the reading of that part of the deposition in which the witness described himself as an un-regenerated and un-repentant rebel. The defendants charged that the charter was obtained by bribery and corruption; that the appellate courts of Virginia had decided that the raffle was a lottery. Judge Wallace directed a verdict for the defendants on the ground that the action could not be maintained, and that the contract in question contemplated the carrying out of a lottery, and that such lottery is forbidden by the constitution.

THE STRIKING TAILORS.

A case of considerable importance to the tailors' unions and merchant tailors and arising out of the late strike of the tailors with Messrs. Brooks Brothers has been on trial before Judge Van Hoesen and a jury for the past two days in the Court of Common Pleas. The plaintiff, Michael Shea, hearing of the arrest of some of his fellow workmen by the Messrs. Brooks in March, 1876, went, in company with others, to the Mercer street police station for the purpose of rendering assistance to some of the men who had been arrested and were then in custody. While in the station house, and, as he alleges, quite peaceable and orderly, he was arrested by Mr. John E. Brooks, one of the members of the firm of Brooks Brothers, and taken into custody. After being detained all night in the station house in a cell he was brought before Police Justice Kilbreth in the morning, and no charge being then made against him he was discharged. Thereupon he commenced suit against Mr. Brooks to recover $10,000 damages for this false arrest and imprisonment, claiming it was maliciously done by Mr. Brooks and for the purpose of intimidating him and compelling the men who had struck to yield to the terms proposed by the firm of Brooks Brothers, and also that the arrest, even if its cause was well founded, was without due process of law. The question of law in the case has been taken already to the General Term, who have held that the offence charged being simply a misdemeanor, both at statute and common law, the plaintiff could not be arrested without a complaint being first made against him and a warrant duly issued, except the act complained of was commited in the presence of the officer making the arrest. In the present case the plaintiff was simply standing in the station house at the time of his arrest, and was engaged in no unlawful act at the time. The defence is that it was the captain in charge of the station house who made the arrest, and that Mr. Brooks simply acquiesced after the same was done. All the testimony in the case was submitted yesterday and counsel are to sum up this morning.

CONEY ISLAND FIRE-EATER.

Visitors to Coney Island during the summer months, while strolling along the beach, could hardly have failed to notice a thick-set young man, with a bullet head, arrayed in spangles, whose accomplishments included that of lunching on hot coals. He could juggle, too, and perform other feats for a trifle, but his awe-inspiring act was that of eating fire. His name is "Billy" Shepperd, and he appeared yesterday before Judge Gildersleeve, in Part 2 of the Court of General Sessions, as a complainant. Bereft of his "trunks" and "tights" and with his head shorn to the bone he told his mournful tale. During his occasional visits to fairs and other places where his audiences were wont to assemble Carlo Martins, an overgrown Italian bootblack, alienated the affections of his better half. Some time during last month, however, a reconciliation took place and they repaired to the house of a mutual friend at No. 10 York street, where bumpers of beer made matters lively. Martins followed them to the house in a wrathy mood and confronted Mrs. Shepperd, whom he charged with stealing his revolver from his room, which she had previously visited. Without much ado the enraged bootblack seized the woman and was about to throw her from a third story window, when the fire-eater rushed to the rescue and smote the Italian on the nose with his fist. The male combatants then clinched, when Martino drew a stiletto and stabbed Shepperd three times on the head, inflicting painful though not serious wounds, from the effects of which he was confined in the hospital. This was his story as told to Assistant District Attorney Russell, while on the other hand the dark-eyed prisoner claimed that he only acted in self-defence and did not intend to injure anybody. The jury promptly convicted Martino of an assault with intent to do bodily harm, and Judge Gildersleeve sent him to the State Prison for two years and six months.

MURDER WILL OUT.

A well dressed man named John Reilly was arraigned in the Court of General Sessions, Part 2, yesterday, charged with murder. The prisoner, it may be remembered, was arrested in this city for the crime for which he is now indicted, after an absence of thirteen years. The story goes that on the 21st of August, 1864, Officer John O'Brien entered the liquor saloon of Reynolds & Ryan, at Forty-first street and Ninth avenue, for the purpose of arresting Reilly, who was then under indictment as the leader of a gang of thieves who had successfully robbed several stores on Eighth avenue. Reilly, it is claimed, resisted the officer with all his might, and finally shot him in the forehead, inflicting a wound, from the effects of which the unfortunate victim died in a few days at St. Luke's Hospital. Reilly disappeared after the shooting, and for years all traces of him were lost. Not long ago he returned to this city, but so changed in appearance that his intimate friends could not recognize him. He was, however, finally identified and arrested. On searching the files of the District Attorney's office for the old indictment it was found on examination that a clerical error had been committed setting forth that Police Officer O'Brien had lived until the 31st of September, there being no such day in the calendar. This mistake rendered the indictment worthless, so that a new one had to be found by the April Grand Jury. When called to the bar yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Russell the prisoner looked pale and haggard. His counsel, Messrs. William F. Kintzing and John O. Mott, interposed a plea of not guilty and Judge Gildersleeve remanded him to await his trial.

NEW PLAN FOR PIERS.

In February, 1874, the Dock Department having in contemplation the construction of several piers on what was known as the "new plan" advertised for proposals furnishing several hundred thousand pounds of screw bolts, brace rods, washers and armature plates, a sufficient quantity to complete all the piers then in contemplation. Gustave Callemeyer and C. F. A. Dambmann, being much the lowest bidders, obtained the contract, which, by its terms, was to be completed in six months. Subsequently the Dock Department changed its plan, and as many of the articles specified in the contract thus became unnecessary they did not call for more than half the quantity contracted for. The contractors protested against this action and after considerable correspondence induced the department to call for the balance, which was furnished long after the expiration of the contract. Iron, meanwhile, had fallen considerably and Messrs. Callemeyer & Dambmann had to run their factory at a loss in order to fill these supplemental orders. They therefore bring suit to recover $12,208 and two years' interest as damages for non-fulfilment of the contract. The trial was commenced yesterday before Judge Donohue and a jury. In defence the city contends that the words "more or less" which were used in the contract in connection with the quantities specified qualify the specifications so as to relieve the Dock Department from calling for more than they chose. Also, that if liable the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the cost of production on the day the contract expired, it not being fair that the plaintiffs should be put in any better position by the breaking of the contract than they would have been in had it been faithfully carried out by the Dock Department; and the bid of Callemeyer & Dambmann being so low as to leave them no margin for profit their damage, the city contends, is substantially nothing. Mr. Thorndike Saunders appeared for plaintiffs, and Corporation Counsel W. C. Whitney and his assistants, A. J. Requier and E. H. Lacombe, for the city.

TROUBLES OF A SURETY.

In June, 1877, Catherine P. Scott, as administratrix of her deceased husband, John Scott, gave Walter W. Aikman and Robert E. Smith as her sureties. Upon their examination by Henry H. Morange, who appeared for the next of kin, they were found insufficient, and the administratrix was ordered to furnish an additional bondsman in the sum of $10,000 to justify in double the amount. After some delay, in January last Mrs. Scott gave as her additional surety Simon Bolivar. He swore he was a householder and had $27,000 in United States government bonds in his possession, and the Surrogate accepted him. William H. Schieffelin & Co. having a judgment of $2,500 against Mr. Bolivar, and having heard of his sudden good fortune, employed Mr. Morange to institute proceedings on said judgment. In February last supplementary proceedings were initiated against Mr. Bolivar, and he again swore that he had $27,000 of United States government bonds in his bureau at home in East Sixty-third street. A demand was then made upon him by the counsel for Schieffelin & Co. that he apply sufficient of these bonds as would pay the judgment, but, upon the earnest solicitation of Mr. Bolivar, the proceedings were adjourned to next day, he promising to see the plaintiffs forthwith. Failing, however, so to do, Mr. Morange procured a warrant of arrest for Mr. Bolivar, but on the Sheriff going to his house it was ascertained that he had left and gone to New Jersey. Strict watch, nevertheless, was kept, and after three weeks vigilance he was arrested and lodged in Ludlow Street Jail. Mr. Bolivar was brought into court yesterday before Judge C. P. Daly in the custody of the Sheriff, and after certain preliminaries Mr. Morange moved that an order be made that Mr. Bolivar apply so much of the bonds as would be sufficient to pay or stand committed until he comply with the order. Mr. Conlan, who appeared for Mr. Bolivar, resisted the application; but the Court peremptorily granted it, remarking that the Sheriff would willingly go with him to get his bonds, and that in this manner he could easily extricate himself from embarrassment.

SUMMARY OF LAW CASES.

Henry Clausen pleaded guilty in the Court of General Sessions yesterday to the charge of selling adulterated milk, and Judge Sutherland fined him $10.

A police officer named William Fitzgerald gave a check for $25 on the Dry Dock Savings Bank in payment of a debt to John Downs, who raised it $100 and got the money. In the Court of General Sessions yesterday the accused pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

A youth named Henry Sullivan was employed by Mr. Charles A. Byrne as messenger in the office of the Dramatic News in September last, and disappeared with $66 90. The thief was recently arrested, and on being arraigned yesterday in Part 2 of the Court of General Sessions pleaded guilty. Judge Gildersleeve sent him to the Penitentiary for one year.

Michael Nathasan was yesterday convicted of robbery, having, on the night of the 26th of last month, knocked down August Voelkel and forcibly taken $75 from his person. Judge Sutherland sentenced him to ten years in State Prison.

In the suit brought by James McHenry against the Erie Railway Company a motion was made yesterday before Judge Donohue to compel Mr. McHenry, as a non-resident, to file security for costs. The suit is in aid of McHenry's motion to allow him to intervene, in which he claims that the Erie Railway Company owes him some $2,000,000. Judge Donohue took the papers.

A motion was argued yesterday before Judge Van Vorst to confirm the report of the referee in the suit for divorce brought by Caroline Ramppan against Francis A. Ramppan. The referee, Mr. J. P. Ledwith, found for the plaintiff, and also for $150 additional counsel fee and $7 a week alimony. The report was confirmed. Mr. Benjamin F. Russell appeared for the wife and Richard Merwin for the husband.

Some ten years ago Oscar Taylor brought a suit against the city to recover $29,000, which was referred to Patrick H. Jones, who reported $6,000 as due the plaintiff. In February last the city obtained sixty days' time to make out a case. A motion was made before Judge Donohue to have the case put on the General Term calendar for May. Judge Donohue denied the motion, on the ground that there was no prospect of its being reached if put on the calendar.

Charles Meronda has brought a suit for limited divorce against his wife, Ella Meronda. The plaintiff charges the defendant with being an habitual drunkard and dangerous to live with. She charges him with being brutal to her. The case came before Judge Donohue yesterday on a motion for alimony and counsel fee. After hearing Colonel Spencer on one side and Colonel George H. Hart on the other Judge Donohue took the papers.

There has already been published in the HERALD the facts of the suit brought by Thomas C. Clark against the Mechanics' National Bank of this city to recover some $27,000 alleged to have been deposited by the plaintiff in the bank, and payment of which was refused. The bank denied the deposit and its liability in the premises. After a trial which has occupied three days, before Judge J. F. Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas, a verdict was yesterday rendered for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, with interest, amounting to $31,874 73. A motion to set the verdict aside as unwarranted by the evidence will be argued in a few days.

Chief Justice Curtis yesterday handed down a decision denying a motion for a new trial made by Mr. Spellissy in the case of Gruber & Howard, which occupied the greater part of last week in its trial. The motion was based on the grounds that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action and of surprise, and further on the exceptions to the charge, counsel for defendant claiming that the action was brought to recover for an alleged malicious prosecution, while the same was sent to the jury and decided by them on the question of excessive and exorbitant levy, and that even on the latter question the jury were erroneously charged to find the whole value of the goods, with interest from the date of the levy, when they should have been instructed to find only for the excess of the levy over what was necessarily attached to secure the recovery and fees in the original suit. The Chief Justice noted an exception to his decision on defendant's behalf for the purpose of appeal.

Caroline Knauff, as administratrix of her husband, has brought a suit against the Board of Charities and Correction to recover $5,000 damages for the death of her husband in Bellevue Hospital. She charges that her husband, who was sick and disabled, applied for admittance in the hospital, and was treated by the physicians. She says they administered ether to him in such an unskilful and negligent manner as to cause his death. The city demurred to the complaint on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Judge Sedgwick yesterday gave judgment for the plaintiff on the demurrer.

A SOLDIER'S CRIME.

WILLIAM W. JAMISON, OF GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, PLEADS GUILTY TO A CHARGE OF ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO KILL.

William W. Jamison, a soldier-musician, doing duty at Governor's Island, was arraigned yesterday in Part 2 of the Court of General Sessions before Judge Gildersleeve, charged with robbery under circumstances that might well provoke a shudder. It would seem that on the night of the 4th inst., accompanied by a fellow soldier in uniform, he entered the Grapevine Hotel, at the corner of Eleventh street and Sixth avenue. Mr. Alexander McClelland, the proprietor, was about closing up and refused to accede to their demands for whiskey, but finally consented to give them some seltzer water, which they drank without paying for. They thereupon proceeded to the reading room, and just as Mr. McClelland was about to warn them to leave he heard sounds of a desperate struggle. On going to the reading room he saw the unfortunate soldier lying on the floor covered with blood, and Jamison standing over him, pistol in hand. McClelland promptly ordered the two men to leave the premises, upon which Jamison turned upon and, presenting the pistol within an inch of his head, backed him to the bar, at the same time using the most loathsome expressions. In this critical moment Mr. McClelland tried to pacify his murderous visitor, but all his efforts proved unavailing. The ruffian fired the pistol twice in order, as he said, to show the proprietor that the pistol was not loaded with "chicken wheat."

After this flourish Jamison ordered McClelland to give him two of his best cigars, with which request the latter complied. But this concession did not appease him, and finding that he would have either to fight or submit to further villanous demands McClelland grappled with his assailant and wrested the pistol from his grasp. But this was not all, for while McClelland was endeavoring to persuade him to leave Jamison suddenly pounced upon him and dashed him to the ground, where he made a most determined effort to regain the pistol. The alarm was then raised and McClelland's household having been aroused a police officer rushed to the scene and captured Jamison. Mr. McClelland had his thumb severely sprained, while his head was cut by the hammer of the pistol in his struggle to wrest the weapon from the soldier.

When Jamison was taken before a police magistrate the next morning he stated in extenuation that he was crazy drunk at the time of the occurrence and was altogether unconscious as to what had happened. The Grand Jury before whom the case was sent considered it one of a most aggravated character and found an indictment against the accused for robbery and another for felonious assault, with intent to kill.

The captain of the company to which Jamison belonged at Governor's Island was in the Court yesterday, and interested himself in his behalf on the ground of his previous good character.

Assistant District Attorney Russell accepted a plea of guilty of assault with intent to kill, the full penalty for which is ten years in the State Prison, and Judge Gildersleeve remanded the prisoner for sentence in order that certificates of his previous good character may be presented to the Court.

THE VANDERBILT WILL.

At the close of the proceedings in the Vanderbilt will case, yesterday, Surrogate Calvin announced that it would require some extraordinary reason to induce him to prolong the time now set down for the hearing of the case. This includes to-morrow and nine days in the month of June. The Surrogate said he thought in all conscience that the case should be concluded in these ten hearings, as no fewer than sixty-nine witnesses had already been sworn. Judge Black is still ill and unable to be present.

The magnetic physician, Mrs. Clark, was cross-examined at length yesterday by Mr. Clinton. She was consistent in her statements, but was wholly unable to describe the Commodore's room or any of the furniture in the portions of the house she swore to having visited. The two nurses who attended the Commodore in his last illness were present in court, but Mrs. Clark said she did not recollect ever having seen either. She said she had searched for the letter from the Commodore asking her to call and treat him, but could not find it. Mr. Lord said he would call her husband and her sister-in-law to swear that she had received such a letter and that they had read it.

John P. Curry, a topographical engineer, swore to the Commodore's having used profane and violent language toward him on one occasion. Horace E. Brown testified that he knew the Commodore and conversed with him about Cornelius; the decedent said he wished Cornelius were in good health so that he could lean on him; witness lent Cornelius about $800; it was all repaid except $100, and one day witness spoke of this amount to the Commodore; the latter said, sharply, "I didn't think you were such a damned fool as to get rid of your money in that way; now you will have to wait for your pay, like Mr. Greeley and others who lent him money, until I am dead." Cornelius V. De Forest and Charles Stuart were sworn, but testified to nothing of any moment. A. Oakey Hall, C. K. Garrison, Nathaniel Jarvis and other well known names were on the list of witnesses then called over by Mr. Lord. None of them were present, and the case was adjourned until Friday.

STARTLING NEWS.

A young man, with a singularly fertile imagination, is Thomas Smith, of No. 38 Mulberry street. "Catchpenny Tom" is his sobriquet, and he seems to deserve it, for more than once in the past he has enriched himself by hoaxing a credulous public. It is not long since abiders in the Fifteenth ward were horrified by the announcement that the Brooklyn Bridge had fallen down, and when the third term controversy was warmest people were aroused by Tom from their beds by his stentorian declaration that Grant had been assassinated. At about midnight on Tuesday West Washington place resounded with the dreadful tidings that war had been declared between England and Russia. It was "Catchpenny Tom" again at work, and he further ventilated his geographical knowledge by adding that there was "fighting going on in Dublin." Officer Seaman chanced upon Mr. Smith at a moment when he was most vociferous, and discovered that his extras were advertising sheets of a weekly story paper containing an illustration and opening chapters of "Robert Emmet; or, True Irish Hearts." Tom was brought before Judge Duffy yesterday, but, in no way abashed, he said that he had come across the papers last night and owing to his defective reading capacity he was led to believe from the sheets that there was a row in Dublin and so he proceeded to ventilate the news. His fine of $10 he was unable to pay and consequently was locked up.

FOGARTY VS. FOGARTY.

It is now more than a year since Dennis Fogarty left his wife and a couple of sturdy miniatures of himself in possession of the emoluments of a Ninth avenue grocery store. He went to Chicago, and so long did he remain there that "the little ones at home" despaired of seeing any more of him. Mrs. Fogarty herself was sceptical on this point, and, believing that she was thrown on her own resources, she prosecuted business with new energy, and, she says, succeeded in stocking the place and in faring well in her humble way. Affairs were beginning to prosper when back comes Dennis from Chicago and forthwith instals himself as the lord and master of the whole establishment. This assumption of sovereignty was disputed by Mrs. Fogarty, and domestic strife resulted. Yesterday morning Dennis came before Judge Duffy to show why he should control the means of ingress to the place, but was told that his wife had equal claims at least. In the afternoon back he came to protest against her being left in possession of the key, as that meant domestic ostracism for himself. He claimed that he sent money from Chicago, helped to stock the store, owned the furniture and had various other proprietary rights which should be taken into consideration; but the Judge declined to interfere further. The last heard of the case was Mr. Fogarty inquiring if he could get a warrant if she interfered with him, and Mrs. Fogarty requesting the same privileges if he molested her. Both of those queries were answered in the affirmative, so that may not be the last of it.

DEATH OF A DESPERADO.

Henry Eckert, of Morrisania, yesterday spied a tomcat in the act of attacking his fowl, who were peacefully turning up the soil in search of a vagrant worm. Mr. Eckert seized a shotgun, and a moment later Thomas was ready for the undertaker. Officer Dakin took charge of the remains and afterward escorted Eckert to the Harlem Police Court. The prisoner excused himself for the murder on the ground that the deceased had previously assassinated more than a dozen of his pets. Judge Wandell fined the prisoner $1.

NEW YORK EAST CONFERENCE.

CLOSING OF THE SESSION—LIST OF THE APPOINTMENTS FOR 1878.

After the opening of the Conference yesterday in First Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, the committee of inquiry previously appointed in Rev. S. Howland's case reported that there was good ground for bringing charges against him. The case was thereupon referred to the Presiding Elder, who, under the discipline, will call a court, and Dr. Buckley was requested to present his charges and proofs before that court. The general tenor of the charges are of petty swindling in commercial dealings and general untruthfulness. The court will sit in this vicinity.

A collection amounting to $771 was taken up for four poorly paid preachers, one of whom, Mr. Tompkinson, was driven from his parish in West Granby, Conn., for pushing the trial of liquor manufacturing members of the church there. Two of the accused withdrew from the church, but the others transferred the property from the Methodist Episcopal Church to independency. Mr. Tompkinson gets about $450 of the amount raised.

Various reports were read, one of which, condemning church amusements, fairs and the like, as contrary to the Word of God, the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, and as lowering the tone of piety, and especially demoralizing to the young, drew forth some discussion; but a resolution attached to it condemning those practices was adopted, while the report itself was laid on the table.

The stewards distributed $8,355 among the superannuated preachers. Revs. B. Pillsbury and W. McAlister were appointed a committee on interdenominational comity to represent the Conference in Hartford during the summer. A resolution asking the Conference to express its wish that the limitation of three years might be removed from the pastoral term was indefinitely postponed.

Drs. Fowler and Curry addressed the Conference on their respective publications. Without the knowledge and against the protest of the chairman of the Committee on Publications other members of the committee, on their individual responsibility, expunged a couple of paragraphs from the report before reading. This act created a little dissatisfaction and was condemned in itself, but the report as thus made was finally adopted.

The statistics of the Conference in brief are as follows:—Churches, 284; value, $4,420,100; parsonages, 100; value, $704,850; full members, 38,570; probationers, 4,351; Sabbath schools, 283; scholars, 43,202; officers and teachers, 5,842; money raised for pastoral support, $186,146; deficiency on this account, $17,933; for bishops' support, $2,166 60; for Conference claimants, $7,622; for missions, $27,648; for church extension, $1,306; for tracts, $718; Sunday School Union, $703; education, $465; for Freedmen's Aid, $912, and for American Bible Society, $562.

NASSAU PRESBYTERY.

The Presbytery of Nassau commenced its session in the First Presbyterian Church at Huntington on Monday evening. The Rev. Mr. Bradner, of Glen Cove, the retiring Moderator, preached the opening sermon on "The Relation of Parents to Their Children." The officers elected for the ensuing six months are as follows:—Moderator, the Rev. Mr. Russell, of Oyster Bay; Clerk, the Rev. Mr. Symington, of Roslyn. On Tuesday George H. Lee, of the First Church of Huntington, was received under the care of the Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. Delegates to the General Assembly to be held at Pittsburg were elected as follows:—The Rev. Franklin Noble, of Hempstead; the Rev. Mr. Sinclair, of Smithtown; Judge John J. Armstrong, of Jamaica; Ebenezer Kellum, of Hempstead. In the evening there was a discussion upon "Parents' Duty to Children in Matters of Religious Training."

FIVE POINTS HOUSE OF INDUSTRY.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Incorporators of the Five Points House of Industry Messrs. E. P. Fabbri, Henry E. Hawley and De Witt C. Hayes were elected members of the Board; Messrs. Morris K. Jesup, Hugh N. Camp, George F. Betts, Charles Ely, F. G. Foster, D. Lydig Suydam, D. S. Egleston, A. Van Rensselaer and Charles Lanner were elected trustees for the ensuing year. The annual report shows that during the past year there were more than 900 pupils in the school and 824 inmates of the institution. Four hundred and fourteen thousand meals were given at a cost of less than 3¾ cents per meal. More than 7,000 garments and 1,400 pairs of shoes were used. The receipts were $29,373 16; expenditures, $30,396 33. The present indebtedness of the House is $9,285 67; cost of support per capita, $76 63.

A ROUNDSMAN REBUKED.

Mr. Max H. Bender, associate editor of the Staats Zeitung, returned home on the evening of the 25th ult. and found his wife in tears. She said she had been insulted by a gang of rowdies at the corner of First avenue and Seventh street. Mr. Bender went in search of an officer to make known his grievances. Seeing Roundsman Lindeman in prolonged and familiar conversation with a female up the avenue Mr. Bender advanced and made his complaint, saying "Officer, there is a case on the corner which needs your attention." The officer replied, "I am attending to a case now that is of more importance." "Then, if you refuse to disperse these loafers who have insulted my wife, and whose profane language can be heard from even here, I demand your number." The roundsman complied with the demand, adding, in a mandatory way, "Now, make the most of it, and clear out of here, quick." "I am a property holder and a taxpayer," said Mr. Bender, "and it is your business to protect, and not insult citizens." "I'll let you see if you can talk to me in that insolent way," said Roundsman Lindeman. "I'll lock you up if you don't shut up;" and, as Mr. Bender remained to brave the official threat, the worthy policeman was as good as his word, and, apologizing to his female friend for having to leave her so abruptly, he marched the unfortunate but sturdy Bender to the station house, where he lodged a charge of disorderly conduct against him. Sergeant Bergbold would not entertain the complaint, and discharged Mr. Bender from custody. The latter sought redress from President Smith at Police Headquarters yesterday. During the hearing of the testimony the roundsman gave several interesting exhibitions of his temper, which called forth the mild rebuke from the Court, "Roundsman, you are allowing yourself to get too much excited here."

"That was just the trouble in the case in question, Your Honor," said Mr. Bender sententiously.

VEXATIOUS EXCISE.

The new Excise Board have given notice to all unlicensed dealers that unless their applications are handed in before the first day of May they will be prosecuted. A great majority of these keep what are called "three cot" houses, and fearing to submit their applications and be refused, have waited, in the hope that relief would come from Albany. Now that they are pushed they are bitter in their denunciation of the country members of the Legislature, and charge them with corrupt motives in defeating the Daly bill. It is the general opinion among them that it was lost only because the price of "putting it through" was not forthcoming.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

ASSIGNMENTS AND BANKRUPTCY MATTERS—CREDITORS' MEETINGS.

An effort is being made to throw David E. Swan, the late Secretary of the defunct Clairmont Savings Bank, into bankruptcy, and six creditors have filed a petition against him for that purpose. The following are the creditors who unite in the petition:—John T. Briggs, $304; Sarah A. Briggs, $2,500 06; John Lee, $570; Frank R. Theirs, $278 68; Charles Theirs and Euphemie C. Seabrook. The amounts of the claims of the last two creditors are not given in the petition. The claims of all the above creditors are on promissory notes either made or indorsed by Swan. An injunction has been granted restraining him from disposing of or transferring any of his property.

Ingnats Nissen, dealer in cigars, at No. 77 Warren street, has been adjudicated a voluntary bankrupt on his own petition before Register Ketchum, with liabilities amounting to $23,900, and no assets. The debts were contracted mainly by the firm of I. Nissen & Co., dealers in tobacco, in 1873 and 1874; the firm was composed of Mr. Nissen and Hainman Nathan, the latter being now in Europe, and the petitioner does not know where the books of the concern are. The principal creditors are:—Barnes & Geromes, $6,769 95; Solomon Spitzer, $4,900; estate of J. M. Mayorga, $2,541 24; Louis Spitzer, $2,200; E. N. Wilcox, $1,858; L. F. Auga, $1,700.

A meeting of the creditors of John William Smith, carpenter, at 133d street and Madison avenue, was held at the office of Register Little. Schedules were presented showing liabilities amounting to $20,057 51, and no assets. Claims were proved by Jennet Smith for $4,000, and by Christian Armbruster for $313 15, and James E. Miller was elected assignee in bankruptcy.

In the matter of Louis M. Oberholer, bankrupt, before Register Dwight, a meeting of the creditors ordered to be held yesterday was stopped by an injunction granted at the request of Robert W. Aborn, James Moir and Edward Baldwin, composing the firm of Aborn, Moir & Co. and Aborn & Baldwin, whose claims aggregate about $7,100. The meeting was called to declare a dividend, the assignee, Mr. John W. Mason, having a balance of $2,507 29, but as there was a suit pending against the assignee the injunction was obtained on that account. The bankrupt failed in 1871.

The investigation of the affairs of M. Rader & Son, bankrupt tobacco merchants, before Register Little, went on, and Mr. Max Rader was examined concerning his real estate and life insurance policies.

The examination of the members of the firm of Waterhouse Brothers, manufacturers of woollens at No. 52 Murray street and at Passaic, N. J., was concluded before Register Little yesterday afternoon, and a vote was taken on the composition offer of the firm to settle with their creditors at fifteen cents on the dollar, cash, and the composition was accepted—forty-five creditors, representing $49,000 out of $57,000 of the unsecured indebtedness signing the resolutions.

Joseph Wetmore and Alexander Levene, dealers in notions at No. 26 East Broadway, made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors to William Harris. Their liabilities amount to about $2,500, distributed among a large number of creditors.

The schedule in the matter of the assignment of Joseph Hauck and Gustav Hauck, comprising the firm of J. Hauck & Sons, wholesale provision dealers, doing business in Eldridge street, to Peter Miller, Jr., were filed yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas. The total liabilities were $59,459 24; assets, $13,505 23.

There was also filed in the same court the schedules in the matter of the assignment of Gustav A. Radtke to H. T. Cleveland. The liabilities are stated at $8,480 82; nominal assets, $10,857 71, and real assets, $4,367 84.

TRADE AND TRANSPORTATION.

A regular meeting of the Board of Trade and Transportation was held yesterday at their rooms, No. 110 Pearl street, at which the President, Captain Ambrose H. Snow, occupied the chair.

The Executive Committee, through their chairman, reported that more commodious rooms had been secured at Nos. 87 and 89 Pearl street, to which the office of the Board will be removed on the coming 1st of May, where the next meeting will be held.

Mr. F. B. Thurber, Chairman of the Committee on Transportation, reported at length upon bill No. 3,547 of the House of Representatives, introduced by Representative John H. Reagan. In conclusion the committee offered the following resolution:—

> Resolved, That the bill for the regulation of interstate commerce introduced by the Hon. John H. Reagan, and which is now pending in the House of Representatives, in most of its provisions meets with the hearty approval of this Board; but we are of the opinion that in order to make it effective a board of competent commissioners should be provided to supervise its workings. Further, that the pro rata feature of said bill, though equitable in principle, is so difficult to put into practical operation that it may safely be omitted for the present.

The report and resolution were unanimously adopted.

Mr. Simon Sterne, of the Committee on Legislation, reported that a bill had been introduced into the Legislature concerning the appointment of State Railroad Commissioners, and an argument had been made before the railroad committee. The principal opposition, Mr. Sterne said, was made by Mr. Chauncey Depew, who stated that "if the Railroad Commissioners in Massachusetts were asked their opinion as to their own usefulness they would answer that 'they were worth nothing.'" Mr. Sterne stated that he had written to Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., asking whether the Railroad Commissioners of his State really entertained other than their published opinions, to which an answer came that "Mr. Depew's statement was untrue and that he was guilty of a gratuitous piece of impertinence."

After the transaction of some routine business and the passage of a resolution favoring the exemption of mortgages from taxation the Board adjourned.

ALLEGED ARSON.

Before Judge Pratt and a jury in the Kings County Supreme Court yesterday, an action was brought by the Newark City Insurance Company to recover from Charles W. F. Dare, formerly proprietor of a children's carriage factory, in Kent street, Brooklyn, the sum of $994, the amount of a policy which they paid defendant when his premises were partially destroyed by fire in 1874. An ex-foreman of the defendant swore that he had been requested by Mr. Dare to burn the building, and on his refusal that he saw Dare set fire to the premises himself. The case is still on.

Government Bonds Weak, States Dull and Railroads Irregular.

Money on Call Active at 6 a 7 Per Cent.

WALL STREET,
WEDNESDAY, April 10—6 P. M.

It has been uphill work for the bulls on 'Change to-day, and downhill work for pretty much every kind of speculative property. A "facilis descensus," of course, as is always the case with a market that has neither public nor bears to sustain it. Shortly after the opening prices began to slip, quietly at first, more rapidly afterward, and with something approaching a plunge before the close. Happily the pace exhausted the motive power, and the decline was checked before material damage was done. Nevertheless such as was experienced was sufficient to reduce values from ⅛ to 2 per cent, and to leave the market at the close in a decidedly uncertain and feverish state. The action of the Senate yesterday in passing the Union Pacific Sinking Fund bill was regarded as very thoroughly bottling up Mr. Gould, and a vague alarm prevailed that the event might lead to free sales of Northwestern common on his part and an abandonment of the effort to control the election. The reasoning is certainly not very logical, for it would seem that if 25 per cent of the Union Pacific net earnings are to be diverted from its treasury the part of wisdom would be to acquire enough additional facilities to restore them. Howbeit, the defeat of Gould was taken to imply a weakness in the Northwestern movement, and shares were pressed for sale at a loss of 1⅛ per cent on the day's business. The good bull manners of the rest of the list were quickly corrupted by the evil communication thus afforded them, and the business of manufacturing lower prices became the occupation of everybody for the rest of the day. Lake Shore, the grangers and the anthracites were unhappy together to about the same degree, and even the gossamers lost more than they could afford to lose under the present attenuated condition of their quotations. Thus, Ohios dropped back to 10⅜, and Pacific Mail from 20¼ to 17⅞—the latter property, however, is famous for having screws loose, and probably a new one was reported to-day. So far we have mentioned but one cause for the decline, and that not the most important one. Shortly after midday a telegram from Baltimore announced that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company had passed its dividend. Subsequently it became known that the cash dividend had been passed, but that a scrip dividend of 4 per cent had been made in lieu of it. The correction was sufficient to check the downward impetus to the market which had been created by the error, but was not strong enough to rally the market at the close. The two circumstances alluded to, falling upon a market which was naturally depressed by the gloomy weather, have reversed the course of speculation for the moment, but there are no reasons to believe that the decline will be either serious or lasting.

COMMERCIAL REPORT.

COTTON: SPOT QUIET; FUTURES CLOSED STEADY—FLOUR DULL—WHEAT UNCHANGED—CORN STEADY—OATS LOWER—WHISKEY STEADY—PORK NOMINAL—LARD EASY—PETROLEUM FIRM—OILS QUIET—SPIRITS TURPENTINE QUIET—ROSIN QUIET—COFFEE QUIET—SUGAR FIRM.

WEDNESDAY, April 10—6 P. M.

Business was moderate in almost every branch of trade, and in some quarters the markets were decidedly dull. On 'Change flour was dull. Wheat was without decided change. Corn was steady. Oats dull and lower. Whiskey was steady. Pork quiet and nominal. Lard quiet and easy. Cotton on the spot was quiet; futures closed steady. Coffee was quiet. Sugar remained firm. Oils, naval stores and petroleum were quiet.

COFFEE.—The market for Rio was quiet, without change in prices. By auction, 3,286 bags Rio sold, including 2,544 bags ex Constance, 1,000 do. ex Glenlogan and 642 do. ex Halley, within the range of 14½c. a 19⅝c., making the average 15.35c., which is as good as the valuation. Mild coffee was quiet. The business for the week is summed up as follows:—5,430 bags Laguayra, ex Dona Zoyla, sold on private terms; 4,427 do. do. (sold in lots for consumption within our range); 1,398 do. Maracaibo, do.; 945 do. Mexican, do.; 500 do. St. Domingo, in transit to Europe. COCKING IN NORTH CAROLINA.

TWELVE FIGHTS BETWEEN NORTH CAROLINA AND GEORGIA BIRDS—GEORGIA THE WINNER.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

CHARLOTTE, April 10, 1878.

Although the interstate cocking main was yesterday broken up by Georgia's withdrawal twelve interesting hacks were fought to-day by the cocks of the two States. The day was bright and sunshiny, and by half-past nine A. M. a large crowd had gathered at the pit clamorous for sport.

FIRST FIGHT.

Two cocks were matched and the fun commenced at half-past ten. North Carolina matched a dark gray Sim Jenkins, 5 lbs. 8 ozs., against a dark red Stone Irish, 5 lbs. 7 ozs. Both stood erect an instant, then dashed together like a flash, the Jenkins receiving a cut in the back on the third buckle. On the fourth buckle, second delivery, the Stone Irish was severly cut under the left wing, but not disabled. Numerous body wounds were received by both for fifteen minutes, when both sank down exhausted, renewing the struggle again and again with like result, until the Jenkins by superior endurance tired his antagonist down and finally brained him. Time, 55m. 22s.

SECOND FIGHT.

Georgia entered a dark red shawl neck, 5 lbs. 4 oz. against a blue gray Sim Jenkins, 5 lbs. 4 oz. Both cocks were shufflers and quick fighters, Georgia getting severely cut under wing on fourth buckle. Retaliating with a back wound on third buckle second delivery, but on the fourth delivery was badly cut in head and neck. North Carolina made a quick break on fifth delivery, getting home in the breast and neck, keeling Georgia over dead. Time, 4m. 22s.

THIRD FIGHT.

North Carolina was next represented by a black stone fence, 5 lbs. 4 oz., against a red shawl neck, 5 lbs. 4 oz. The shawl neck was a high flyer, and made a quick break at the black, going clean over him. The black met him half way on the return, inflicting slight wound under wing, also on third buckle of second delivery, but received severe wounds in back and neck in third delivery. The shawl neck now had an easy time, ending the fight by a cut throat. Time, 3m. 28s.

FOURTH FIGHT.

Georgia matched a bright red shawl neck, 5 lbs. 8 oz., against a deep red Jenkins, 5 lbs. 8 oz. The Jenkins received a cut in the wing on the fourth buckle, but getting clear, made a fierce break at his antagonist, inflicting numerous body wounds, closing the round with a severe thrust under the right wing, disabling the shawl neck, and after a few more buckles brained him. Time, 5m., 15s.

FIFTH FIGHT.

This fight was one of the prettiest of the day. North Carolina pitted a dark-gray Sim Jenkins, 5 lbs. 4 oz., against a red pyle shawl neck, 5 lbs. 4 oz. Scarcely did they touch the ground before each broke for the other, flying high and buckling rapidly, North Carolina flirting over dead on the fifth buckle from a cut throat. Time, 1m. 30s.

SIXTH FIGHT.

Georgia next matched a dark-red stone Irish, 5 lbs. 4 oz. against a cripple toney-gray, 5 lbs. 4 oz. Both stood straight and flew high, breaking quickly. The gray got in a good thrust under the wing, freed himself and hung again in neck. North Carolina cheers loudly and Georgia offers to draw, without success. The gray energetically followed up his advantage, giving his opponent the coup de grace on the second buckle of the third delivery with a home thrust under the left wing. Time, 3m. 30s.

SEVENTH FIGHT.

The seventh hack commenced in a spirited manner, North Carolina pitting a white pyle Jenkins, 5 lbs. 8 oz., against a stone Irish, 5 lbs. 11 oz. The cocks were shufflers, but broke at each other like lightening, striking rapidly without abatement. Georgia getting cut in back and body on second delivery, got a bill hold on North Carolina, inflicting a severe cut under the left wing, weakening him greatly, and pressing steadily cut him in the neck, driving his gaff clean through the brain on the fifth buckle of the fourth delivery, killing as game a cock as ever fluttered. Time, 2m. 3s.

EIGHTH FIGHT.

Georgia next matched a dark-red shawl necked 4 lbs. against a white flaxey eye, 4 lbs. 14 oz. A rapid, fierce fight ensued. The "shawl neck" gained the advantage in the go off, sending home a dangerous thrust in the back of the flaxey eye, but the latter, not the least discouraged, made repeated breaks at him, going clear over time and again. The red was too much for him, though, inflicting numerous cuts in the back, sides and breast, until the poor bird sank down almost immovable, his persecutor giving him no chance to recuperate, sending the cruel steel repeatedly through his head, and finally braining him. Time, 15m. 16s.

NINTH FIGHT.

North Carolina jubilantly entered for the next contest an imported Irish red, 5 lbs. 13 oz., against an Irish and shawl neck cross, 5 lbs. 11 oz. Confident of victory, Georgia had the advantage in the go off, giving North Carolina a severe back wound, also a thrust in the side in the second delivery. This was too good to last, for North Carolina retaliated with a severe cut in the thigh on the next delivery, followed by a telling thrust under the left wing. Georgia now seemed too weak to last much longer and would have been easily whipped; but North Carolina was so enfeebled by the first wounds that he could not press the fight, allowing Georgia a rest, when Georgia's backers offered to draw, but were refused. North Carolina recovering, now made a break at Georgia, when the latter, by a lucky scratch, administered a cut throat, keeling North Carolina over dead, and eliciting rousing cheers from the Georgians. Time, 11m. 25s.

TENTH FIGHT.

A Georgia stone Irish (4 lbs. 12 oz.) is the next contestant against a Stone Fence black (4 lbs. 13 oz.) bird. They eye each other a moment, then make a rapid break, buckling rapidly, the Stone Fence receiving a back wound on the fifth buckle; but soon proved himself the best cock by cutting and turning the Irish over repeatedly, inflicting a killing thrust in the heart in the fifth buckle of the fourth delivery, killing him. Time, 4m. 35s.

ELEVENTH FIGHT.

This fight was short, Georgia pitting a red shawl neck, 5 lbs. 3 oz., against a grayback Jenkins, 5 lbs. 2 oz. Both cocks were high flyers, and went together like lightning, Georgia putting in the first thrust in the back, and on the third buckle they made a quick break together, buckling rapidly, Georgia administering a cut throat on the fifth buckle, fourth delivery, and nailing his opponent through the head four times alternately, killing him in 2m. 20s.

TWELFTH AND LAST FIGHT.

This was also a short fight, North Carolina pitting a saddleback Sim Jenkins 5 lb. 8 oz. cock against a light red "shawl neck," 5 lbs. 10 oz. This was the prettiest fight of the day, both cocks being high flyers and possessed of fine action. Without an instant's hesitation each broke for the other, leaping over each other's head alternately. The first four passes they buckled rapidly with terrible force, Georgia giving the first wound. North Carolina freed himself, when like a flash Georgia was in him. Then there was a see-saw of cuts and gashes, both cocks striving nobly for victory, when the fight was ended by Georgia shoving in a telling thrust under the left wing, pinning the heart of his antagonist. Time, 2m. 2s.

Georgia was jubilant over her victory, having won seven of the twelve fights of the day, there being as much interest manifested in the ultimate result of the "back" fights as there would have been on the main. Large sums changed hands on each fight, and lively sport is expected to-morrow.

PEDESTRIANISM.

DOWNY'S TASK—HE CONTINUES HIS WALK AT THE CENTRAL PARK GARDEN—HE RESTS AFTER THE NINETY-SECOND MILE.

Up to a late hour last evening James L. Downy was still endeavoring to accomplish the feat of walking 400 miles in 100 hours at the Central Park Garden, although his wearied appearance at that time was such as to warrant the belief that he would not complete more than one-fourth of the task before breaking down. The lower portion of the track being exposed to the open air, Downy was at the mercy of the rain yesterday, and to this his friends mainly attributed his enervated condition. He walked twenty-four miles five laps in 5 hours. On the sixth lap of the 28th mile he stopped 2m. 30s. He stopped 35 seconds on the 36th mile for a drink. On the fourth lap of the 40th mile he stopped 20 seconds for a drink, and on the seventh lap of the 48th mile he stopped 10 seconds. On the 50th mile he stopped 50m. 30s. to change his shoes and socks. At the expiration of 12 hours he had made 55½ miles. On the fifth lap of the 59th mile he stopped 32 minutes, and on the last lap of the 71st mile he paused 15 seconds for a drink. At the completion of the 75th mile he rested 2h. 37m. 57s., and eleven laps further on he lost 45 seconds in arranging his dress. On the 82d mile he took a rest of 10 seconds, and on the third lap of the 84th mile he rested 3h. 40m.

Toward the close of Downy's effort George Law, the amateur, walked eight miles with him. Mr. Goodwin, of the American Amateur Athletic Club, also went round the track with for over two hours to encourage him in his plucky attempt to hold out.

At twenty-two minutes past nine and after walking the thirteenth lap on the ninety-second mile Downy stopped, and, having taken a cold shower bath, lay down in a thoroughly exhausted condition. It was considered extremely doubtful whether he would undertake to go on the track again.

The following table shows the time occupied in making each successive five miles since the start up to nine o'clock last evening:—

Miles.	H. M. S.	Miles.	H. M. S.
Five	0 46 46	Fifty	10 01 10

WALKING MATCH BETWEEN W. E. HARDING AND CHRISTOPHER RICE—HARDING WINS.

RUTLAND, Vt., April 10, 1878.

A walking match came off here to-day between Christopher Rice, of Rutland, and William E. Harding, of New York, at the Town Hall. The match was for $250 a side for fifty miles. It resulted in a victory for Harding, Rice giving up on the forty-first mile, a little over a quarter of a mile behind. Harding made the fifty miles in 9h. 2m. 23s., resting 7m. 5s., making the actual walking time 8h. 58m. 18s. Harding's best mile was his first in 8m. 35s. The first ten miles was made by him in 1h. 30m. 3s.

BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB.

The Brooklyn Yacht Club held their regular monthly meeting last night at their rooms, corner of Court and Montague streets, President Blossom in the chair. R. H. Huntley, of the Niantic, was elected Rear Commodore, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of John B. Norris. Mr. H. H. Lamport, Vice President of the Continental Insurance Company, was elected a member of the club. Ex-Commodore G. T. Haight was elected an honorary member. The matter of selecting a location for a new clubhouse was referred to the Board of Trustees, with full power. The club then amended section 8 of the bylaws as follows:—

Allowance of time for second and third class sloops to be based on length only, one-half of overhang aft included in measurement.

After the transaction of some further business of an unimportant character, the club adjourned.

A CATAMARAN RACE.

A race took place on Tuesday afternoon from a point off the Erie Basin, South Brooklyn, to and around Fort Lafayette and return. The contesting vessels were the catamarans John Gilpin, owned by Latham Fish, and the Tarantella, owned by Captain Frederick Hughes. It was a close race over the entire course, the latter named boat winning by a single length. The run occupied only forty-five minutes.

WRESTLING.

CHARLES MURPHY, OF NEW YORK, AND CHARLES CONNER, OF VERMONT, MATCHED.

Mr. Charles Murphy, of New York, and Charles Conner, of Vermont, both well known as champion wrestlers, met at the Clipper office in this city yesterday in the presence of a number of sporting men to make a match at collar and elbow wrestling. They were not long settling their business as they agreed to wrestle on Wednesday, April 24, for $250 a side the best two in three, fair back falls, according to Ed James' rules. They each put up $100 forfeit, and the final $150 a side will be put up two days before the match takes place, and the winner to take the proceeds after paying the expenses. The judges and referee to be chosen the night of the affair.

PLEA OF A COLORED TRAGEDIAN.

NEW YORK, April 9, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Your article in this morning paper headed "Richard III in Coffee Color" you criticize severely those who were unfortunate enough to be the willing tools of A white man who styles himself F. L Yerance late of Fords Opera House Batimore Md. who held out all manner of flattering promises to myself & other if we would play in what turned out to be the Burlesque of Richard III. last night when the curtain rose we were left to our own resources with know Prompter no stage manager & nothing to help or give us & Idea of what we should do while our manager Stood in the front of the House collecting tickets and money for what he knew to be A fraud and an insult to inteligent people & A stigma upon those who were to take part in that farce now Dear Sir I make no pretense to beign an Actor nor do I aspire to histronic fame I am only what you are pleased to call a Chesnut Mullatto with A long head & A close cropped wool & in murdering Richard last night I was only carring out the managers instructions to the very letter while I knew that I should have done better with some light play, but men of inteligence & great intelect men who have had all the advantages in life have made great failures in that powerfull & sublime Character of Shakespeare, & what more you expect of the Chesnut Mullatto

MARITIME MISCELLANY.

Capt W Watson, of the Cunard steamer Algeria, from Liverpool, and Capt B Voss, of the German steamer Lessing, from Hamburg, have our thanks for special meteorological observations made in connection with the HERALD Weather Service.

The purser of the steamer City of Washington from Havana, has our thanks for favors.

SHIP P R HAZELTINE, from New York for San Francisco, ashore in Port Wollast Harbor, Cape Horn, lays in smooth water, with seven fathoms forward and eighteen aft. Capt Herriman telegraphs that the ship and cargo can be raised. There is insurance on cargo at San Francisco to the amount of $95,000.

BARK ELINOR VERNON, Capt Copp, on her last voyage from New York (Feb 17) for Dublin made the run from Sandy Hook to Cape Clear in 14 days.

BARK CONCORDIA.—A survey on the bark Concordia (Nor), Olsen, from Liverpool with salt, arrived at Wilmington, NC, April 2 with loss of spars, &c., found her foremast broken below the hounds, foretopmast and foretopgal.antmast gone, foresail, foretopsail and royal sails lost, and other sails badly chafed and split. Cargo all right. She was ordered to refit.

BARK STONEWALL JACKSON, Arbecam, at Boston, from Havre, reports Feb 15, lat 48 54 N, lon 18 30 W, during a heavy SW gale, Manning Ells, seaman, a native of Scot's Bay, NS, fell from the topmast yard to the deck, fracturing his skull; he died same day and was buried at sea. From the lon of 18 W to 61 W had a continued succession of hard westerly gales, during which split sails and chafed fore and aft stays badly. March 2, barometer 28.41, experienced a severe gale, commencing at S and veering to SW, W, NW and NNE, back to WNW, blowing with hurricane force and tremendous cross sea running, sea breaking all over the ship, blowing the spray as high as the foreyard, ship lying to under lee clew of lower main topsail, which at times was becalmed when rolling in the trough of the sea. March 31, 135 miles E of Cape Cod, had a hard NW gale, during which blew away inner jib, foretopmast and mizzen staysails, and split foresail and was blown off to the northern edge of the Gulf Stream. During the passage the barometer has ranged the highest and lowest Capt Arbecam had ever seen it in the Atlantic, ranging from 28.41 to 31.24, and during 20 years' experience at sea had severer weather this passage than ever before. Having a poor, incompetent crew, not one being able to perform the duties of a seaman, some with not a change of clothing, and two only of twelve that could steer, has been the whole cause of injury to sails and rigging.

SCHR L & M KNOWLES, Emery, which arrived at Para Feb 27, from Boston, had a very rough voyage. She left Boston Jan 22, and on 23d, PM, the second mate at the wheel, and first mate standing on the taffrail behind, a heavy sea struck her under the starboard quarter, and at the same time a snow squall struck her a little on the port quarter, causing her to jibe instantly, parting the main sheet and halyards, breaking mainboom 15 feet from the jaws, parting fore sheet and carrying away foretopmast back stay; set in to snow heavily, freezing as it fell. After three hours hard work made everything snug, but was unable to save anything outboard. The mainsail, which was nearly new, went like brown paper as soon as the water got hold of it, and only a few cloths were left on the head and leach. Both mates had a narrow escape from death, but having their eyes on the sail when it started instinctively threw themselves on the deck. The second mate carried with him a spoke of the wheel, which he still held in his hand when he picked himself up. As the mainboom came over it tore from the taffrail the solid oak chock through which the sheet was rove, which would have brained the mate but for his presence of mind. During the rest of the night it was almost impossible to retain footing on deck, and in the morning had 7 inches of ice on the bows; 25th, split foresail and got it down to mend; sent main gaff topsail down and bent in place of mainsail. From 25th to 29th had fearful gales, during which carried away most of lanyards of rigging, parted foretopmast back stay twice and broke chain plates. All hands busy repairing until afternoon of Feb 1, when tremendous sea prevented work; Feb 4, heavy sea and light wind, vessel rolling and slatting horribly; tore new fore gaff topsail; repaired it and set an old topsail and jib, but split topsail into rags in a few hours; Feb 5 and 6, head winds increasing to gales, carried away jibs; such pitching and rolling Capt E says he never experienced; Feb 7, fore rigging badly started in the night; repaired and shook reef out of foresail, wind being light, but sea running high as ever; 4 PM, head of foresail gave way and while repairing temporary mainsail started; Feb 8, calm, but rolling so heavily that work was suspended; 20th, entered port of Salinas, having been 30 days without a mainsail or boom, and had been new to go into port with. As the cargo was much damaged by salt water would discharge at Para and sell cargo there, which would compel the abandonment of the design of ascending the Amazon.

SCHR BOSTON, 112.97 tons, 31 years old, of Cotuit Port, has been sold to Alfred Hall, of Boston, for $300.

SCHR M C MOSELEY, at Baltimore 10th from Cardenas, reports encountered heavy weather; lost foresail, deck load of molasses and sustained other damage.
